Marshall-M'Arthur Mystery Heightens

'GLOBAL WAR' POST SEEN FOR STAFF CHIEF

Statement From Commander In Australia Indicates He's Being By-Passed.

UP TO FDR, CHURCHILL

Head of American Army Due For World-Wide Command From London, Report.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Around Generals George C. Marshall and Douglas MacArthur today center military mysteries so intimately related to global strategy that only President Roosevelt or Prime Minister Churchill would be competent to state the facts.

Some congressional sources confidently expect Marshall, now chief of staff, shortly to be named commander-in-chief of all Anglo American armed forces throughout the world with headquarters in London. That is the latest speculative phase of the Marshall mystery.

The mystery of MacArthur, Allied commander in the southwest Pacific, is:

What caused him in a public statement to denounce the Roosevelt-Churchill strategy being pursued against Japan and imply that his command was being relegated to a subordinate position in the Pacific?

MacArthur's tart statement from Australia was arriving here yesterday just about the time Washington was swept with reports that Marshall was under consideration for the spectacular global command. Spectacular hardly does it justice. A top general over Anglo-American land, sea and air forces would command 18,000,000 to 20,000,000 men.

Although only Mr. Roosevelt or Churchill would know all the answers to all the questions, some facts are emerging which suggest that either of both of these military situations can be persuasively over-simplified.

On reliable authority, Mr. Roosevelt has recently been considering a new assignment for General Marshall.

First Marshall development came 16 days ago in a published report that he had been picked to command Anglo-American troops

Eden Discloses Purpose of Hess Flight to Scotland: Der Fuehrer Didn't Want to Have to Defeat Britain

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—Upon his arrival in Scotland in May, 1941, Rudolf Hess told the Duke of Hamilton that "the fuehrer does not want to defeat England and wants to stop fighting," Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden disclosed in the house of commons today.

Eden furnished commons an authoritative account of the sensational flight of Adolf Hitler's one-time deputy, who was regarded as the No. 3 Nazi until his mysterious arrival in Britain.

Eden related:

Before he reached Scotland in 1941, Hess told the Duke of Hamilton, he tried to arrange a meeting in Lisbon and three times previously attempted to fly to Dungavel, Scotland, near the duke's home. Hess said he met the duke at the 1936 Olympic games in Berlin.

The last time he attempted a flight was in December, 1940, but he was turned back by the weather and other factors.

He did not want to come at the time of British successes in Libya, he told the duke after he was incarcerated at Maryhill barracks lest it appear a sign of weakness on the part of Germany. He waited until Germany was again gaining successes—that is, in the Balkans.

Hess insisted he came to Britain without Hitler's knowledge.

He told Hamilton, who interviewed him on May 11, 1941, that he had come to Britain on a "mission of humanity."

Hamilton, who was a wing commander in the RAF and did not recall having met Hess before, flew to London and reported the conversation.

Hamilton told the authorities he believed the prisoner was Hess. This fact was confirmed by I. A. Kirkpatrick of the foreign office, who had known Hess and who talked to him May 13, 14 and 15.

Hess' aim was to convince responsible British persons that England could not win and its wisest course was to make an immediate peace.

Germans Apply Torch to City, Shoot Citizens

Fifth Army Extends Bridgehead To 20 Miles In Depth As Enemy Strives To Build Defenses Against Advance On Major Port.

(By Associated Press)

American Fifth army troops expanded their Salerno bridgehead to a depth of more than 20 miles today and seized three mountain towns amid reports that the Germans were burning and pillaging Italy's great port of Naples (Pop. 925,000).

Nazi evacuation of the city appeared to be in progress.

Eyewitnesses at the front said the sky over Naples was black with smoke, and Italian refugees declared the Germans were looting and destroying the city and shooting thousands of Neapolitans.

Epidemics of typhus and typhoid in the waterless, hungry city heightened the reign of horror.

A military spokesman said the enemy was establishing a strong defense line on the approaches to Naples from the south and east, but the extent of their demolitions in and near the city appeared evidence that the Germans hoped to hold back Allied attack toward the city from the Salerno area.

The Fifth army meanwhile fought its way steadily east and northeast from Salerno with American troops capturing the town of Campagna and Montecorvino-Rovella while the British chased fleeing Germans from the town of San Cipriano.

On Corsica French soldiers and native patrols pursued a German garrison estimated at 12,000 men toward the eastern shores while American Liberator bombers blasted at the principal avenue of German evacuation from the island—the Corsican harbor of Bastia and the Italian port of Leghorn.

The military spokesman said he had "nothing to add" to Winston Churchill's statement yesterday that American troops had landed on Sardinia, but the belief prevailed here that whatever units were sent to that island intended only to cooperate with an Italian division which already at Premier Baloglio's command took control and compelled the Germans to flee.

Another menace to the Germans on the Italian mainland, Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth army, drove northward and inland and occupied the key highway and rail center of Potenza.

Occupation of Potenza, which is a junction point of five main roads, gave the Allies control of the entire inland highway and rail systems south of a line extending eastward from Salerno.

A military spokesman, declaring "the first phase of the Salerno battle now is definitely over," added "we have inflicted upon the enemy heavy losses in personnel killed and captured and in equipment."

Many prisoners taken in attacks which already have wiped out the last vestiges of German lines to the east of the original beachhead were found to be non-German even though from enemy combat units. Ordinarily in the past, even in Tunisia, Poles, Czechs and other non-German Europeans who had been impressed into Hitler's armies were relegated to non-combat roles and the military spokesman drew the only possible inference: "It would appear to indicate a serious German manpower shortage."

The capture of Potenza brought to light one of the Italian campaign's boldest exploits by a small British patrol which stowed away on an Italian train and rode it northward to the very outskirts of that rail and road junction while it still was in enemy hands.

The patrol hid in the hills directly overlooking the town and

$25,893 CHARGE LOOMS AS SNAG TO AIRPORT JOB

Mayor Says Phone Company's Line Removal Estimate 'Unearthly High.'

What may prove to be a new stumbling block in the path of Mansfield's airport project appeared today when the Mansfield Telephone company asked the city $25,893 for placing the company's lines underground and building a new sub-station at the airport site.

The city last week reached tentative agreement with the American Telephone and Telegraph company for re-locating its lines at a cost of $17,000 to the city, and today's request from the Mansfield firm brought the total city burden to more than $42,000 for removal of utility lines at the site.

Mayor W. J. Locke described the Mansfield Telephone company's figure as "unearthly high" and said he hoped the city and the Chamber of Commerce airport committee would be able to negotiate for a lower amount.

Gustav Hirsch, consulting engineer for the telephone company presented the company's cost estimate to city and Chamber of Commerce officials in a session shortly before noon today.

Hirsch said the figure he offered the city represented the lowest cost at which the company's lines could be moved at the airport so the site will be clear for construction operations.

The total cost of the materials and labor will be $32,147, he said but the company hopes to salvage equipment in the amount of $6,254 to reduce the net cost to $25,893. Central office equipment and new aerial cable will be the major cost items on the job, he said.

The entire line removal project hinges on the War Production

$4,450,776 IN, BOND DRIVE 75 PER CENT OVER

Purchases Take Spurt But Chairman Warns 'Tough Days Are Ahead.'

When Richland county Third War Loan drive leaders totaled sales receipts today they found the county drive nearing the three quarter mark with $4,450,776.50 subscribed toward the $6,060,000 goal.

Several subscriptions from Mansfield industries added $592,711 to the till yesterday. Largest sales were in series G notes of which $500,000 worth were purchased by three subscribers.

Small bond purchasers continued to add their $25, $50 and $100 E bond purchases to the total subscribing $26,586.75. An additional 471 subscribers made the total number of small purchasers 5903.

Though apparently pleased with the progress the drive is making, Chairman H. G. Brunner said today the "toughest part of the drive" will be rounding up the last million dollars.

In Washington today, Americans heard the message of Soviet Premier Josef Stalin acknowledging the "great support" which United States munitions and supplies are giving the Russian armies and calling for the successful floating of America's $15,000,000,000 war loan drive.

His personal message to America was read by Maj. Gen. A. I. Balyaev, chairman of the Russian purchasing commission, at the Global Command?

For the past few days, there have been widespread reports that Gen. Marshall was slated for a new post.

NEW TAX PLAN GIVEN TO FDR

It Would Withhold 30 Per Cent Instead of 20 But Provide For Post-War Refund.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — A tax program that would take at least another dime out of every dollar of taxable individual income—but refund about 13 cents after the war—has been presented by the treasury to President Roosevelt for his opinion

To keep lower bracket taxpayers on a pay-as-they-earn basis under such a program, the 20 per cent witholding levy would have to be hiked to at least 30 per cent.

The treasury's plan calls for individual income taxes to yield at least $8,000,000,000 of the $12,000,000,000 in new 1944 revenue demanded by Mr. Roosevelt. The remainder would be account-

Baruch Testifies Today In Senate's Father Draft Fight

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Bernard M. Baruch, administration specialist on home front problems, faces the senate military affairs committee today as its final witness before the senate votes next week on a bill to defer drafting pre-Pearl Harbor fathers.

Baruch, special adviser to War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes, was called because he reported after a recent survey of west coast manpower problems that there was widespread labor hoarding and waste in war plants.

Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, D., Mont., hoped Baruch would support his claims that the army and navy could get the 1,200,000 men they want by Dec. 31 from such labor pools without drafting fathers.

Senate debate on Wheeler's bill to prevent father inductions until Jan. 1 was delayed until next Tuesday. It is possible that a vote will not come before Oct. 1, after which selective service has ruled that dependency alone no longer will be a basis for draft deferments.

Marshalling his arguments for the debate next week, Wheeler said that testimony during the last week revealed two ways for the army and navy to fill manpower needs without drafting fathers.

One method would tap the pools of hoarded labor, he said. The other would be to reduce physical and mental standards and lift the age limit for limited service personnel.

Wheeler said Maj Gen. Lewis Hershey, selective service director, told him that if the army and navy would relax physical and mental standards along lines he advocated that the pool would produce 2,000,000 men.

Hayden Edwards was fourth 8,256 and former congressman A. P. Lamneck was fifth with 6,782 Newton A. Thatcher received only 1,885 votes. E. Maxwell Young was a write-in candidate.

AIR MYSTERY

Man Falls To Death From High-Flying Plane.

SELINSGROVE, Pa. — (AP) — Naval intelligence officers joined today in an investigation of the death of a man who fell from a high-flying airplane near here and landed in a meadow.

The plane continued westward without slowing and there was no indication of its identity, point of departure or destination.

At Philadelphia, the Fourth naval district reported that two service identification tags were found on the body, one bearing the name of a naval officer and the other the name of a coast guardsman.

A district spokesman added, however, that "we know no more about the man's identity than we do about the plane, which is nothing."

HOSTESSES SAVED

14 Stranded Aboard Scow in Ohio River.

CINCINNATI (UP)— Fourteen USO hostesses being entertained aboard an Ohio river scow were rescued last night when Coast Guards came to their aid after the boat was stranded in the river off Bromley, Ky.

F. N. Bierce, host of the party, told the Coast Guard that the propeller and part of its shaft were lost as the boat cruised.

SURPRISE DRILL

New Jersey Tries Out Its Air Raid Defenses.

NEW YORK—(INS)—A surprise air raid drill throughout the state of New Jersey was held today.

The first audible blue signal was sounded at 9:51 a. m., EWT, at the request of the state director of civilian defense.

The all clear was sounded 31 minutes later, at 10:25.

SEASON OPENS

But Few Squirrel Hunters Go Out; Lack Ammunition.

The squirrel season opened today in Richland county and the entire northern half of Ohio, but hunters were scarce because most of them have no ammunition.

A number of Mansfield hunters who couldn't wait for the season to open at home started shooting last week in Knox county which is in a different hunting area and has an earlier open season.

The hunters who had a stock of shells saved for this fall were the fortunate ones, because government restrictions on the manufacture and sale of ammunition for civilian use left most dealers with little or no supply of shotgun shells.

The squirrel season will be open in Richland and other northern Ohio counties until Sept. 30. Bag limit for opening day is four of the bushy-tailed animals. The possession limit is eight after the first day.

KATE SCORES

NEW YORK—(AP)—Radio songstress Kate Smith completed a 17-hour, one-woman bond selling spree over the Columbia Broadcasting system today and counted a total of $30,407,550 in War bond pledges.

Miss Smith, who last October sold more than $2,000,000 worth of bonds in a similar campaign, made two-minute appeals on all CBS programs from 8 a. m. yesterday to 1 a. m. today.

GOES TO SLOW TIME

SALEM, O. — (AP) — City council voted to reinstate eastern standard time here Sunday until the last Sunday in April, 1944, when the city will revert to war time.

Autumn Makes Its Entry Tomorrow At 5:12 P. M. Sharp

As if trying to keep on seasonal schedule and do what is expected of them, a few trees here and there over the city today were sporting red and yellow leaves.

Tomorrow—at 5:12 p. m. to be exact—autumn will officially arrive with its promise of gaily colored leaves, early morning haze and those last picnics.

Though fall threatened last week driving Mansfielders into closets for their winter coats, they were back in summer clothes again today. Furnace fires were extinguished and the city prepared to welcome autumn with open doors.

Two Cities Turn Down OPA's Ordinances On 'Black Market'

OPA "black market" ordinance proposals, similar to the one now before Mansfield city council, had been turned down today by the Elyria council and tabled by Shelby council.

At Elyria, council members said they wouldn't put the ordinance on the city records until they find out "what OPA officials mean by their own regulations."

Elyria council also objected to a "buyer" penalty clause in the proposal which was not included in the ordinances now in effect in Cleveland and Lorain.

The "black market" regulations, however, are aimed primarily at retailers who charge more than the ceiling prices for food and other consumer goods, an OPA representative explained two weeks ago when he asked Mansfield council to vote the ordinance. Fines up to $45 or $50 would be assessed against violators under the regulation.

Mansfield council has taken no action on the OPA proposal, several councilmen indicating after the meeting two weeks ago that they did not favor obligating the city to help the OPA enforce its rules.

Since the request was presented to council, the Mansfield unit of the United Rubber Workers of America has gone on record as favoring passage of the ordinance, sending a letter to council asking support of the proposal.

DRIVING: Reds Roll On Over Nazis In Relentless Offensive

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—Adolf Hitler's badly-mauled German divisions, cracking under the terrific punishment meted out to them by the powerful Russian offensive, reeled back to their eastern defense wall on the Dnieper river today as the Red army scored new advances along the whole length of a 750-mile front.

Dangerously weakened by the incessant hammer blows of the Russians, the once invincible German legions apparently were being broken into isolated units and nowhere, according to the latest Moscow war bulletin, were they able to halt the Red army tide.

The last formidable barrier before the Dnieper on the central front was battered down yesterday when a savage Soviet drive slashed across the Desna river line between Bryansk and Kiev.

With the capture of Chernigov, most important German base on the lower reaches of this river, the way was opened for Red army forces to strike directly at Kiev and Gomel. The latter is the gateway to White Russia.

Another thousand odd towns and villages were liberated by Russian advances yesterday, while upwards of 7,000 Nazi troops were slain and many more captured, the Russian communique said.

In addition, the Soviet air force, credited with 63 Nazi planes destroyed over the front yesterday; blasted concentrations of railway trains at Gomel, Vitebsk and Dzhankoi on the central front last night, setting many of them afire.

In their drive to push the invaders from Russian soil, the Red army spearheads were within 18 miles of Smolensk, which was slowly being flanked on the north and south. Kiev, the great German bastion on the central sector of the long front, was menaced by Soviet thrusts from three directions.

MOVING: Japs To Shift Seat Of Government From Tokyo

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—The Japanese government has decided to prepare "for the moving of government departments, industrial establishments and the civilian population from Tokyo as well as other important cities in the interest of improving their defense," the Tokyo radio said today.

The broadcast listed a number of drastic measures, including total mobilization of the civilian population and the abolishment of age limits to make all persons liable for national service, which it said were announced today by Premier Hideki Tojo and the government information office "in view of the decisive phase upon which the war will enter during the coming months."

In addition to the evacuation of the Japanese capital and other important cities to strengthen "the defense of the country," the government announced these measures:

Increase of anti-aircraft defense forces, especially the "air protection in industrial regions."

Special measures for the protection of government buildings and factories in Tokyo and other big cities of the country.

Strengthening of government control over all industry.

Centralization of traffic on land and water.

In one of the gloomiest broadcasts to come from the Japanese capital, the announcement said the

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"Yes, I'm afraid he is," I told Ronald. "I fancy he's changed his mind again. At any rate he wants it finished within fifteen minutes, if possible Do you think you can do it? If not, I'll tell him—"

"I can do it easily, thanks to you," Ronald said sturdily. "You showed me how not to worry about it, and I'll get right at it."

"Mary and I will go into the bedroom," I said, "but if some one knocks, call me"

"All right," he answered absently, driving his pen over the paper, and Mary turned from the table where she had put the copies of the personal in a neat pile under a paper weight.

"All set!" she said, and then we went into her bedroom, where she brought out clean towels and soap, and set her cosmetics out on her dressing table.

"Yo' pays yo' money and yo takes yo' choice!" she intoned. "Blonde, brunette, AND redhead! She grinned at me impishly. "Ah got powdah an' creams to suit ev'ybody."

"I'll freshen up after Dicky goes back," I whispered "No use starting now. I only came in here because I thought the boy would work better by himself And I've left the door slightly ajar, so I'll hear the other when he comes."

Purposely I refrained from naming either Ronald or Dicky, knowing how arresting the sound of a given name is, even when one is paying no attention to a conversation.

Mary Understands.

"Wise lady!" she approved, and I knew by her eyes that she understood my ruse. We sat down in opposite chairs, and waited until a knock sounded open the door of the living room. I reached the bedroom door, just as Ronald was rising from the desk.

"I'm here, Ronald," I said "I'll answer it"

"Thank you," he said gratefully, and sat down again to his writing.

With the caution we all have learned to use in these hectic days, I stepped aside as I unlocked the door and opened it the length of the night chain. I was sure the knock was Dicky's but I knew that signals had been sometimes found out and imitated

"Old Grandmaw Caution herself, in person!" my husband gibed, but as I took down the night chain and admitted him, he added with emphasis: "But if you hadn't been leary, I'd have paddled you plenty! This is no time to be brash. Now, where are these things Dad wants me to get? He's in a wax of a hurry, even though Reed, the man who's going to take these over, didn't get there till five minutes ago. But the Chief is surely starting the wheels to turning"

My glance of warning came too late Ronald had heard him, and he sprang to his feet excitedly.

"What's he doing?" he demanded.

Dicky's eyes met his with an expression that he rarely uses, half militant, half sympathetic, but with firmness as its chief ingredient.

"Sorry son," he said, "but you know nobody but the Chief himself can tell you that, and if I were you, I wouldn't ask him any questions. I don't know all his plans myself, and I wouldn't tell anybody if I did. I only know that he's going to town in a big way that ought to get results. The rest of us will have to possess our souls in patience until he gets ready to open up"

"I suppose so," Ronald answered dejectedly, and dropping back in his chair again, resumed his writing

"I'll just be running along with these," Dicky said. "Oh, by the way, dad is sending Katrina over in a few minutes to stay with Mary. He's having a powwow with her now, and when she comes, he wants you to come back to your own fireside. And, Ronald, when you finish your letter, he wants you to bring it over there, too."

"I'll be there," Ronald said, and as I said: "I'll be ready when Katharine comes," Dicky went out of the door.

It was less than five minutes before Katharine appeared, and I saw, as her eyes met mine, that she was excited about something. Characteristically, however, she made no remark, and with a parting admonition to Ronald to lose no time in bringing his letter over as soon as he had finished it, I hurried out of the room and back to my own balcony suite

There I found my father just sending Reed away with the copies of the "Personal" for newspaper distribution. There was no one else in my apartment, and my father explained, with a glance at the closed camouflaged door into the communicating apartment:

"Adams and the others are in there. But I want to ask you a question. Can Miss Whitlock carry on alone with Richard's mother and the children for a few days, so that Lillian can come in here?"

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, Sept. 23.

Fairly active day, the success of which depends upon the concentration, good judgment and wise counsel needful to unwind tangles and problematical situations and calling for much vigilance, sound insight and consideration of a set of circumstances both contradictory and treacherous. There are some indications of growth and expansion but at the same time limitation and stringency Carefully organized projects, critical analysis and good judgment might strike a balance. The personal equation might have weight especially where the young and charming figure.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a rather perplexing and mystifying year, in which subtle undercurrents seem to baffle and bewilder For shrewd handling of such peculiar situations there must be good organization of plans and projects, backed up by sound logic and commonsense.

"The Authority on Authorities"

CORRECT YOUR MISTAKE

Did you ever pass your hand o nthe first round for the simple reason that you had sorted your cards carelessly and didn't realize that you actually held a sound opening bid? If that never happened to you, then you are a very unusual young man or young woman If it has happened, and your partner then opened the bidding, what did you do on your next turn? Your job is really to let him know, the best you can, that you should have bid in the first place, by making some kind of a force or else a jump to game.

North was practically looking for the nearest exit as his partner flailed him for his underbidding. When he could finally get a word in edgewise, he pleaded "Didn't you ever have your cards sorted wrong, so that you passed a hand you should have bid?"

Indeed South had But when North admitted that he found the club A after he had passed and therefore realized he should have opened the bidding there was no excuse for his subsequent action except one he was flustered by his first error and did not think clearly

Noting his strength North should have bid three in clubs or diamonds, a jump, after South opened with 1-Heart. Since he bid only 2-Clubs, and South then jumped to 3-Hearts—a terrific bid after the partner had made an opening pass—North should have gone direct to small slam in hearts, if the pair was not using any artificial slam convention, or else should have employed whatever convention was in use to ascertain the controls for slam purposes He had two chances to correct his first slip, but fumbled them both

TELEPHONE 4251-6

IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

WASHINGTON—This town is seething with gossip over the possible assignment of Gen. George C. Marshall to take command of operations for the knockout blow against Germany.

General Marshall is chief of staff now. He is an outstanding soldier who has won the confidence of congress and of the country. He has directed the enormous expansion and rapid building of our army. Furthermore he is the dominating military figure in the Anglo-American combined chiefs of staff. He has participated in all of the big Roosevelt- Churchill military conferences beginning with the Atlantic meeting in the summer of 1941.

Clapper

Serious consideration is being given now to placing General Marshall in command of the European theater. It is not finally decided. But it looks as if the change will be made.

Many in Washington are saying this is a scheme to kick General Marshall upstairs. The most current version of the gossip is that he has been at odds with the British, that he had a sharp controversy with Churchill at Quebec and that the British are forcing Roosevelt to get rid of him. It is to be done by dressing up the assignment to the European theater as a chance for Marshall to be the Pershing of this war. Gossip embroiders the story in many ways and it is said that General Marshall feels he is being taken out of the game and is eating his heart out. That is the way the gossip runs and everybody is dressing up his own version of it. For once gossip here does not run down a man—and indeed the achievements of General Marshall are being paid the highest compliment by all in the course of the gossip.

First of all, to believe that General Marshall is being kicked upstairs, you must assume that there is to be no knockout blow against Germany. If the Allies are going to drive through to Berlin and crush Germany completely, then about the most important assignment in the war is about over. Quebec laid the detailed plans and time-schedule for the destruction of Germany. Now it remains to find the best man to carry them out. On that basis not many would fail to select General Marshall.

Those who oppose the move question whether Germany is to be defeated that way. They say it will be largely an air war plus a drive up from the Balkans, and that it is wasting General Marshall's time to put him in England when he ought to be running the whole war from here..

Who can know what the best decision is in such a matter as this, except one who knows the secret plans of the war? So it is a matter about which curbstone judgment is not worth much. And it is rather delicate stuff to be tossed around recklessly on the floor of congress.

One can accept it as roughly correct that, in general, Prime Minister Churchill has favored hitting Germany from the soft underbelly while our military men have favored going through France. What they agreed on at Quebec must be for Hitler to find out when the blow or blows fall.

There is the story around here that not only General Marshall is all cut up about the proposed move, but that some of his associates on the joint chiefs of staff such as Admiral King and General Arnold also are cut up about it. They feel he should stay on the team here. Their opposition is explained on the ground that naturally they do not wish to break up the American team which has worked so well. The answer made is that the move would be justified only because the big action job of the war called for the best military man, the one with the most prestige and in whom everyone reposed complete confidence.

I can't believe Roosevelt would take such a successful chief of staff off the job and give him a phony assignment in Europe. It doesn't make sense to me.

I have a great deal of respect for the way the war has been conducted up to now. It is difficult to believe that a colossal blunder is being made about such a valuable man as General Marshall. One must take a matter like this largely on faith.

OUT-OF-STATE LIQUOR BUYING GAINS IMPETUS

Two Corporations Purchasing Spirits For Ohio Bars, Executive Reveals.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — The flow of liquor into Ohio on direct order of state-licensed tavern operators has swollen from a trickle to a torrent, state liquor department records showed today.

"Despite the mounting quantity of spirits imported by permitholders, retailers still seem unable to meet the wartime over-the-bar demand," said Ferd Bing, assistant liquor director.

Bing reported that at least two corporations were formed in Illinois expressly to purchase spirits in whatever volume available for resale to retailers in Ohio and other monopoly states.

He identified these firms as the Import Sales Corp., headed by D. A. Godes of Elyria, and Imperial Importers, Inc., both of Chicago. The latter concern, Bing said, was established by a group seeking out-of-state merchandise primarily for Cuyahoga county (Cleveland) permitholders.

'Godes informed me he has available approximately 92,000 cases of whisky and gin," Bing said. "The Import Sales Corp., for which Godes signs, already has obtained from the state about 1,000 consents for importing liquor."

As an indication of the amount of money involved in a 92,000-case transaction, Bing remarked that federal taxes of $18 per case alone would total $1,656,000. He said he understood Godes' liquor was being bottled by the Cedar Valley Distilling company at Wooster.

Retailers affidavits, required for import consents, show that import sales has entered agreements to sell spirits throughout Lorain county and in most of Ohio's larger cities, Bing added.

He estimeted that Imperial Importers, Inc., also had filed affidavits for approximately 1,000 import consents, possibly covering "many thousands" of cases.

"Including consents obtained by these two concerns, we probably have issued consents for 250,000 cases of out-of-state liquor since March, when the liquor control board adopted a regulation allowing permitholders to import," Bing said.

PLANE OUTPUT CLIMBS SHARPLY DURING AUGUST

WPB Reports War Industries Get Second Wind, Speed Munitions Production.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The War Production board, suggesting that production was getting its "second wind" after a sharp summer slump, reported today that munitions output in August climbed four per cent above that for July and included 7,612 planes.

Aircraft production, the current No. 1 program, rose three per cent in numbers last month and seven per cent in weight but still lagged behind schedule, the report said. The August figure of 7,612 compared with 7,373 in July.

Officials explained that the increased weight emphasized the trend toward heavier models, particularly bombers. The report showed heavy bombers ran 11 per cent above July while fighters increased five per cent.

WPB said recent output also had been marked by improved quality and that production of combat models which have been accorded top preference ratings based on experience had almost doubled in the past five months. During August, the report said, top preference models increased 4,500,000 pounds, the largest monthly increase yet made.

Approved by War Production Board Chairman Donald M. Nelson before he departed on a London mission, the production announcement was held up for many days by the war department, reportedly because it was regarded as too optimistic.

"The performance in August indicated that production appears to be getting its second wind," the report said.

WPB said that plane production in August would have climbed even higher except for design changes. But, it was added, American plane production now has reached a point where we now can afford to take slight temporary losses in production in order to get a more effective model.

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK—Senator Truman has put a finger on an ouch that has been fretting a lot of us in the newspaper business and, I guess, in the magazine and radio trades, too.

He says that some big corporations which have gone over entirely to war industry, abandoning the production of consumer goods, have been spending the people's money on their good-will or institutional advertising campaigns. They get their incomes from government contracts nowadays, and, although they have nothing to sell to the public, they continue to keep their names in the public eye and ear lest they are forgotten. The cost of this advertising is reckoned as a business expense, deductible from income in the computation of their income taxes, and the senator thinks it shouldn't be deductible but should be paid out of profits.

Pegler

The treasury raised this issue a long time ago when there was no question of war-order revenues and the companies were drawing their money from straight commercial business with the public. Some of the leftward ideologists in the treasury argued that advertising constituted a needless expense added to the price of merchandise, but that proposition was resisted as an attempt to starve the press of the income which enables it to remain free and objective and thus superior and preferable to the subsidized pressure press.

The situation really is different now because the present advertisements to which Senator Truman refers are strictly forget-me-nots and many of them, far from exhorting the people to patronize these companies, implore them not to. The railroads, for instance, put it up to you as a patriotic matter to keep off their trains unless your trip is absolutely necessary or your name is Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt.

In the original treasury plan it was contended that the people paid double for this advertisement, first in the loss of taxes on these deductible expenses, and again in a retail mark-up to cover the advertising costs. It all added up to the exact cost of the advertising, not twice the cost, but when our treasury wants to prove something in its own favor, two and two make one or 10 or whatever its point happens to be..

Truman doesn't monkey with that, however. He simply claims that the taxpayers pay the advertising costs of companies which have nothing to sell.

But, if it be granted, as I think he grants, that the good will which these companies have established by advertising and performance over the years is a living thing which must be fed if it is to be kept alive, and a possession of great value, then if you don't let them maintain their publicity for the duration, you are asking them to kill themselves off. Most of them are doing wonderful work in the war and would not have been in existence to do that work on short notice if they had not developed in time of peace. Whether advertising was necessary to that development is not worth arguing. They did advertise and they did develop and when they converted to war production they did so without reservation and to an extent which enabled the president the other day to threaten Hitler with a horrible fate.

If it would make anyone feel better it might be a nice idea to let them make more profits and pay their advertising costs out of profits but if you don't do that and you do disallow the deduction of this expense you kill off their advertising and that is where the interests of our free press are seriously jeopardized.

Our free press, the best and the most independent in the world, lives by legitimate advertising revenue and the only alternative is the kept press of this or that group.

Opportunely for this discussion, the Minnesota CIO recently decided to start its own newspaper, a weekly, to be supported by a tax of seven cents a month on every CIO member voluntary or captive. If we say there are 100,000 members in Minnesota, that means a kitty of $7000 a month for a weekly paper, aside from its advertising revenues, much of which could be obtained by heat or pressure from merchants, contractors, saloon keepers and others who know what is good for them. I don't say this Minnesota paper would do that, but if it did it would be following the established tradition of union presses, not pioneering.

Now, I ask you, does anyone believe that such a paper would give an honest, objective report of any issue involving any CIO interest against any disputant?

Morally, they have no right to levy these assessments for this purpose but unions do have the power to do it and morality never troubles them.

You can't have an honest press under subsidy as the critics of our regular commercial press have so often and so truly pointed out, and this is true even though these angels be the bosses of the Minnesota CIO.

TELL OF SECRET NIGHT WELDING

Witnesses Say Cleveland Firm Violated Orders Under Cover of Darkness.

(By United Press)

CLEVELAND—The government continued its prosecution of seven former officials of the National Bronze and Aluminum company on war sabotage charges today after hearing testimony from former employes of the company that secret welding was done on airplane engine castings at night to avoid detection.

John Brock, chief welder, who was named as a co-conspirator in the case but not indicted, provided the most damaging testimony. Brock testified yesterday that many castings which had been rejected by the Packard Motor Car company, makers of the Rolls Royce Merlin engine, and sent back to National Bronze for scrapping were welded.

Brock said that welders worked a day shift until Frank Schmeller, indicted former general manager of the plant, "came in one day and saw me working on the Packard castings. . . . He gave me a good going over."

Brock quoted Schmeller as saying: "I thought I told you not to weld Packard castings during the daytime. How do you know there isn't an FBI man in the plant." A night shift was established after that, Brock said.

Up and Down THE STREET

Among the many Mansfield families thankful for the message service of the American Red Cross are Mr. and Mrs. John Dekrell. Recently they received a message from their son, Dr. John Dekrell in Budapest, informing them that he was well and thinking of them. It is the first they have heard from him since February and the message which they received last week was sent from Budapest in May. The Red Cross furnishes the family with their only communication with their son since there is no mail service to Hungary.

The event was doubly interesting in that Roy informed them he had just been advanced to the rank of corporal.

The number of first and second grade pupils in Mansfield has shown a big gain this fall over last year, warning school officials that they are going to have to prepare to handle an increased enrollment in elementary buildings within a few years. Enrollment figures for the term that just got under way list 678 first graders and 609 second grader pupils for a total of 1,287, a gain of 116 for the two grades over last year and more than the entire enrollment at Senior high school which declined this year. There are more pupils in the first grade in the city schools this term than in any other grade. The only one near the first grade enrollment is the second grade which is 69 pupils behind.

DEMANDS ARMY PAY SAFEGUARD

Legion Favors Keeping Men on U. S. Payroll Until They Find Work at War's End.

(By International News Service)

OMAKA, Nebr.—The second day of the American Legion's 25th national convention was launched in Omaka today with Gov. Dwight H. Green of Illinois spearheading a mounting demand that soldiers mustered out of the service after the war be kept on the army payroll until they are given "permanent jobs."

Green, a Republican, said:

"The objective of all employment efforts must be permanent jobs for the veteran in private industry, instead of 90 days final pay and a future of social security."

Green, with his statement, was delivering a broadside against proposals made by President Roosevelt. Mr. Roosevelt had recommended that soldiers be given the three-months pay but the Legion, at its present gathering, appeared destined to insist that the veterans of world war 2 be accorded at least a year's pay, possibly their pay until they can find a job in private industry.

The temper of the 1,500 delegates to the convention was anything but reassuring to Mr. Roosevelt and his social planners in Washington. The convention today and tomorrow will start steam-rolling to passage resolutions that will set Legion policy for the next year. This policy, it was forecast, will be opposed to many of the postwar plans of the White House.

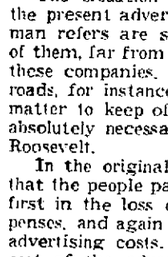
ON BROADWAY-- By Dorothy Kilgallen

Speaking for Myself.

I HAVE just met a young man whom I consider to be the current most unfortunate fellow in New York, and he is doubly unfortunate because it looks as though his particular trouble is going to last for quite a long while and there is not a thing he can do about it.

His name is Frank Sinatra, but he is not THE Frank Sinatra, if you get what I mean, and that is his big headache. I ran across him the other night, and while he was trying to put a cheerful face on the matter, his discomfort was obvious. THIS Frank Sinatra is a tympanist with the Indianapolis Symphony orchestra. He leaves in about ten days for Indianapolis, and he hopes things will be better there, but such is the heaviness of his general despair that he doubts it.



Kilgallen

His troubles, of course, are easy for anyone to picture. When he is introduced as Frank Sinatra, people giggle or guffaw, depending on the sex. When he registers at a hotel, room clerks say, "Are you kiddin'?" His name is listed in the Philadelphia telephone directory, and his mother is awakened at all hours of the night by love-struck girls who beg to be allowed to talk to Frankie. Some of the mail that reaches him is a caution.

Once he met his more famous namesake at a war bond rally. The crooning Sinatra was conducting the rally, and for the privilege of getting a better look at him, the obscure Sinatra stepped up and announced that he wished to purchase a $100 war bond. The crooner beamed upon him. "And what is your name?" he asked. "Frank Sinatra," our object of pity replied. The crowd roared with laughter. Everybody thought he was a great little kidder.

THIS Frank Sinatra is in town now, searching with no success, for a 30-inch kettle drum. If you know where there is a 30-inch kettle drum, for heaven's sake tell him, because on top of all his other troubles that is really the straw that is liable to break the you-know-what.

I noticed an item in connection with the opening of "The City That Stopped Hitler," which revealed the interesting intelligence that all Russian movie actors, directors and technicians are required to attend school for four years before practicing their craft. I wonder if this notion will ever be taken up by Hollywood?

I recall that in "Boy Meets Girl," there was a screen starlet whose life ambition was to get her high school diploma, but in general, Hollywood is not strongly associated with the academic background. Probably a good thing, too. The publicity departments would love the idea, of course, but they'd be so busy taking pictures of Lana Turner leaning over a chemistry retort or Heddy Lamarr studying irregular verbs, or Errol Flynn staying late after school that the poor actors would never get anywhere with their lessons.

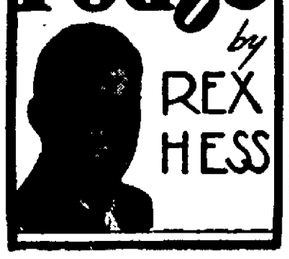
Sport Podge

by REX HESS



Elsie Huntsman is telling me that the annual Coolridge fall golf party is set for next Saturday night, and I inform her that is too bad because I will not be able to be there, and someone pipes up with the explanation that the reason I cannot get there is because I have a newspaper to get out or at least the sport section thereof for the Sunday paper, and Elsie retorts that that is the reason she is telling me all this because I work on a newspaper.

Now I am quick on the uptake on things like this if you give me time, so I get the impression that what Mrs. Huntsman wants is for me to put something in the paper about the Coolridges going to have a party Saturday night and there it is.

It seems that I have some recollection of attending a function of this kind and nature at Coolridge a year ago this time although I am a bit hazy on the details, and one and all agree that it was a great success although there are quite a few who are in the same boat I am and are also hazy about the details but what is a little detail here and there, especially among friends, and besides no one appointed a recording secretary to take down the minutes of the meeting so why bother now about looking up the record.

Although they tell me, at that, quite a few new records were set for one thing and another, and I am willing to believe 'em.

The refreshment situation being what it is, and it is practically non-existent so I am told by those who make point of conducting exhaustive research into such matters, the Coolridges have decided to do away with the refreshments, or rather to make each and every one his own refreshment committee, so I have no doubt that department will be well taken care of, and if it isn't, no one will have anyone to blame but himself. Is this confusing?

Instead of providing refreshments, the Coolridges will have an orchestra brought over from Shelby, and I take it the golfers will dance the light fantastic, and maybe even jump and jive a little and this is something I used to like to do upon occasion before I become known as Bum Dogs Hess. But no one is going to talk me into getting out the ankle wraps so I can jump and jive or even crawl a little on such stimuli as cokes and chocolate milk.

* * *

So I am sorry I can't be there, but blessings on you my children and have a good time and remember it is not cricket to tee up in the rough. It's golf.

Whippets Battle Willard Friday

SHELBY—The Shelby Whippets will meet one of the two teams it defeated last year when they motor to Willard on Friday night.

Shelby defeated the Railroaders, 12 to 6, last year. Practically the same Whippet eleven will oppose the Crimson Flashes this week.

Shelby, Galion and Marion Harding loom out as the favorites in the NCO league after the first week of play. Whether or not Norwalk was extra weak to let Shelby take a 42 to 0 victory last Friday will be seen this week as the Maple City eleven meets Ashland. Galion, who raced over Tiffin Columbian, 38 to 6, will meet Crestline, while Marion plays Columbus West.

Other NCO league teams playing games Friday night will be Bucyrus, who meets Upper Sandusky, and Mt Vernon who goes to Coshocton.

Seek Restriction On Ticket Sales

WASHINGTON — (INS) — The Office of Defense Transportation moved today to prevent the football season from causing a further burden on the transportation system.

The ODT asked college, high school and other football teams to limit the sale and distribution of tickets to the residents of areas in which the games are played.

By such a restriction, ODT said, football games can be played without increasing the already heavy load on buses and trains.

The ODT also repeated a request that all football teams traveling by train, use coach accommodations wherever possible and make reservations the day before departure instead of several weeks in advance.

Yankees Go After Pennant

Majors Resume Play After Brief Vacation.

By JUDSON BAILEY

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

THE MAJOR leagues settled down to business again today for two weeks of solid sending before the season closes, and the New York Yankees took up the now serious task of clinching the American league pennant.

In winning the championship six out of seven years before the present campaign, the Yankees usually have managed to nail the flag up long before this.

Consequently the present delay is aggravating to the Yanks and their followers.

New York needs a combination of five victories or Washington defeats to eliminate the Senators. On the form the Yanks have shown earlier these should not be beyond their powers, but the Detroit Tigers, with whom they were to open a four-game series today, have been one of their toughest foes over a period of many years.

The Yanks are not trailing any club in a season's series, but with the Tigers they are no better than even—nine victories apiece.

Hank Borowy was expected to go to the mound for New York today in quest of his sixth successive triumph and was likely to get Rookie Rufus Gentry for an opponent.

The Senators, seeking their 10th consecutive victory, were booked for the first of three night games with the St. Louis Browns while the Cleveland Indians, still mathematically in the race, opened their last eastern invasion at Boston.

In the National league the Brooklyn Dodgers tackled the St. Louis Cardinals in a battle to hold second place against the Cincinnati Reds and Pittsburgh Pirates. The Reds have a chance to gain ground, playing the last place New York Giants in a doubleheader.

CHICAGO — (INS) — Albert Sabath today issued one of his customary denials that Alsab was through with racing and would be retired. The Chicago attorney said:

"Alsab will be shipped to Belmont park Sunday. It is planned to give him a five-furlong workout Tuesday morning. That should put him in shape for the several Belmont park stakes."

Slip Modigan Returns To Coaching Ranks With Hawks

By WALTER L. JOHNS

(Central Press Sports Editor)

Iowa, under a new coach, Edward P. (Slip) Madigan, former St. Mary's mentor, puts its gridiron hopes on a flock of freshmen this year.

Of 57 players on the squad, 40 of them are freshmen and 36 of them either 17 or 18 years old.

Madigan has only three major letter winners from last year, Bob Liddy, right guard; Bill Barbour, right end, and Tom Hand, left guard.

Of his large squad, 21 players were members of the summer team which drilled for four weeks.

The Hawkeyes open their schedule Saturday, Sept. 25, against Great Lakes. It should be a hard game.

Coach Madigan has made several changes in his lineup, shifting players from position to position.

Barbour, the veteran end, has been tried at tackle. Stan Mohrbacher, a tackle, has been used at guard. Harry Frey, end, was shifted to tackle. Don Murray, a guard, was moved elsewhere as was Bill Gallagher, fullback.

The Hawkeyes have no help from specialized training servicemen because only Army units are stationed at the university and they are not permitted to participate in intercollegiate sports.

The Iowa team may shape up as follows for the opener against Great Lakes:

At the ends, Dave Danner and Harry Frey, a freshman and a junior, respectively, may get the call.

Sked Is Tough.

Joe Grothus, a soph without any experience, and Stan Mohrbacker, with one year's experience, probably will be the tackles.

At the guards, Bob Liddy and Tom Hand, two veterans, hold forth.

Center is Bill Baughman, a senior.

In the backfield, Coach Madigan may start Bill Sangster, a freshman, at quarter; Dale Thompson, another freshman, and Roger Stephens, another frosh, at the halves, and either Bill Gallagher or Jim Hudson, both frosh, at full.

Baughman, a 195-pounder, won two letters as a center at Alabama. Stephens was an all-state back at Waterloo, Ia. Grothus had one year's experience at St. Ambrose college.

The Iowa schedule sends the Hawkeyes against Wisconsin, Iowa Navy, Indiana, Purdue, Illinois, Minnesota and Nebraska after the opener.

ONTARIO SWAMPS UNION BALL CLUB

Scoring 13 runs in the second inning and eight in the fourth, Ontario high school defeated Union 23-4 yesterday in a baseball game at Ontario.

Henry allowed Union only five hits and fanned 12 while Maxwell gave Ontario 15 hits and struck out eight. The two teams meet at Union next Tuesday.

Madison Rams Strengthened

Veteran Additions To Squad Made This Week.

Madison high school Rams open their home football season under the lights Friday night with the Class "A" Delaware high school furnishing the opposition.

Veteran additions to the squad considerably brightened the Madison picture this week, and Coach Jeff DeHaven expects to field a much stronger team against Delaware than the one that lost at New London last week.

John Schuttera, 180-pound center, reported for practice Monday, boosting the Ram weight at that one position by 60 pounds over the slender but scrappy Larry Madden.

Harvey Smith, 142 pound veteran, also was added to the squad to plug one of the guard positions.

Joe Harman, who saw some action at New London, may be ready to start at quarterback for the Rams, which would mean another boost in the Madison poundage.

The Rams, facing probably the toughest schedule in their history, can use new additions to the squad.

Dugger Carries Heavy Load In Buckeye Plans

Ex-Tyger and Bulldog Moved To End; Acts as Ohio State Captain.

By GIL KARP

COLUMBUS—(INS)—Jack Dugger, a product of Canton McKinley and Mansfield high schools, fulfilled the predictions of Ohio State university rooters last season when he won his varsity letter at the tackle slot.

Although he spent the '42 season as a reserve tackle behind "Deke" Willis and Senior Don McCafferty, it speaks well for a sophomore who can win a letter on a team that won the Big Ten and national championships.

This season Jack will have a heavier load to carry. He is slated to start at left end when the opening whistle against the Iowa Seahawks is 'tooted" Saturday.

This in itself will require a show of good football on the part of Dugger if he expects to stop such powerhouses as Dick Todd, Frank Maznicki, and other Seahawks from sweeping around his end position for large gains.

Besides this important assignment, Dugger was recently appointed team captain by Coach Paul Brown.

"Jack is a fine football player and a fine boy," Brown said. "Everyone likes him and we know we can count on him. He's our type of guy."

There will be a lot of pressure on Dugger, as he will captain a team composed mainly of 18-year-old boys. It will take intelligent and quick thought on his part to steady the youngsters when the going becomes tough.

Football isn't the only sport that Dugger excels in. He placed second in the Western conference collegiate discus event last year, and was all-Ohio center in high school basketball one year.

He has already won letters in football, basketball and track, so there is the possibility he may become the first Buckeye nine-letter man since Tippy Dye turned the trick back in 1933-34-35.

Jack is 4-F because his eyes are bad but apparently the use of contact lenses gives him all the vision he needs as a receiver and his "wind" usually short because of asthma, has been holding up better than he expected.

Jack is considered the wit of the football team, and is always ready for fun, but he has his serious side, too.

He's majoring in social study in the university and aside from sports his chief interest is reading.

He's 20, stands 6 feet, 3 inches, and is down to 190 pounds, which makes him ideal for the end position.

During practice Dugger has taken to his new duties remarkably, backing up the defense, blocking sensationally and catching passes as well as any coach can hope for.

If practice performances are any indication of what one might expect during season play, Dugger is through standing in the shadows of anyone on the gridiron this season.

Have a "Coke"=That's Wizard

(IT'S THE TOPS)

"Coke" = Coca-Cola
It's natural for popular names to acquire friendly abbreviations. That's why you hear Coca-Cola called "Coke".

...or how to be liked in London

That's Wizard, says the genial Britisher when he wants to pay you a compliment. Have a "Coke", says the American soldier, and in three words they see things alike. It's as true in a London garden as in a Los Angeles patio. All over the globe, Coca-Cola stands for the pause that refreshes—has become the happy bond between friendly-minded people.

COMPANY PAYS TRIBUTE TO 33 ON HONOR ROLL

Ideal Plant Host at Dinner; All Employes To Receive Insurance Awards.

During ceremonies last night at the Fairway in which 33 members of the quarter-century honor roll of the Ideal Electric and Manufacturing company were presented with gold lapel emblems and reserved seat tickets to "This Is the Army," President S. Glen Vinson announced that today every Ideal shop and office employe was to be presented today with a company-paid $500 life insurance policy.

Prior to the dinner, six employes who during the last year have completed 25 years of service with Ideal, were presented with honor roll membership certificates. They are Frank L. Hanson, vice president in charge of sales; James Hoover, Otto Lommatzsch, Henry Bauer, Roy Teeters and Merl Perkeybile. Posthumous awards were made to the widows of two charter members of the roll—the late Henry Mink and the late Charles Scheska.

During the social hour preceding the banquet President Vinson spoke briefly of "the old family ties" which bind the honor roll together. "We who have worked together for 25 to 40 years," he said, "know a peculiar kinship based in co-operation, understanding and helpfulness. Each of you enjoyed a mighty part in making the Ideal successful."

To the widows of the late members—Mrs. Lena Scheska and Mrs. Nora Mink, he declared "through many years I was proud to know Henry and Charlie. I profited by their friendly criticism and by their pat on the back and their cordial handshake. We were friends, and without friends one gets nowhere."

Assisting Vinson were Otto Fink, vice president and works manager, and O. Howard McDaniel, secretary-treasurer—both honor roll members. Especial tributes were paid to Charles Massa and Raymond Zerby, two 40-year employes of Ideal.

COMING BACK

Ohio Pen Fugitive to Hitch-Hike Back from Omaha.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—If Ohio penitentiary officials want to know how the hitch-hiking is these days, they can keep a watch for Ralph Schimpf of Newark, and his report on midwest traffic.

Schimpf, 27, told Omaha, Neb., police yesterday he would deliver himself to Warden Frank Henderson since the state wouldn't send anyone to Omaha to bring him back to serve the remainder of an auto theft sentence. He was picked up in Omaha on a minor charge.

A 17-year-old boy arrested last night by city police after he sideswiped a car parked on South Adams street appeared in juvenile court today on charges of leaving the scene of an accident.

The damaged car is owned by Adolph Plineger, 280 South Adams street.

After the youth pleaded guilty to the charges Judge Stuart H. Cramer revoked his driver's license for a year and ordered him to pay for damage.

APPEALS COURT OPENS SESSION

Fifth District Judges Hear Real Estate Case; Two Others Dismissed.

Two cases were being heard by Fifth district court of appeals beginning its September term in Richland county today with Judge Charles W. Montgomery, Newark, presiding judge, Judge Clyde C. Sherick, Ashland, and Judge Robert B. Putnam, Millersburg on the bench.

Before the court were the cases of Martha A. Bauer et al against Edward N. Chapman for the partition of property and that of C. H. Workman, executor of the estate of Mattie J. Noble against Mansfield General Hospital et al. ppealed from probate court.

Two other cases scheduled for hearing today were dismissed. Katherine Mitchell, plaintiff appellant, dismissed her case against the Mansfield Coca-Cola Bottling company. She originially sued the company for $3,000 for alleged damages sustained from drinking a bottle of Coca-Cola containing a dead mouse.

Douglas Bonecutter sentenced last January in common pleas court to the state penitentiary for 3 to 20 years on charges of rape also dismissed his appeal.

Reformatory To Get 'NS' Pennant Next Tuesday

Invitations were issued today for the National Service award presentation ceremonies at the Mansfield reformatory Tuesday noon, Sept. 28, at the reformatory.

The institution will receive the "NS" pennant for outstanding work in the production of materials for the war program and contributions to the national well being.

The flag will be awarded by Garrett Heyns, director of the Michigan Correction commission at Lansing. Speaker at the ceremonies will be R. R. Bangham, manager of the manufacturing and sales division of the state institutions in Ohio. Supt. Arthur L. Glattke of the reformatory is in charge of arrangements for the ceremonies.

Music will be provided by the reformatory band. Reformatory Chaplain M. W. Wappner will give the invocation and O. F. Garver, assistant superintendent, will conclude the program. The ceremony will be open to the public only by invitation.

Among the war products which helped the reformatory win the "NS" pennant were parts for war cots and desks, file cabinets, and chairs for military use. Besides, inmates have donated blood plasma, bought war bonds, and have stepped up their production of food on the institution farms.

SOLONS FROWN AT FULBRIGHT PEACE PROPOSAL

Committee To Consider Dozen Other Measures For U. S. Post-War Policy.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Members of the senate foreign relations committee indicated dissatisfaction today over the house-adopted Fulbright resolution expressing congressional approval for United States participation in maintaining future peace.

At a committee meeting, the measure, passed by a 360 to 29 vote in the lower chamber yesterday, was discussed amid indications that a completely new resolution would be approved for full senate consideration.

Sen. Tom Connally (D) Tex., chairman of the senate committee, called a special session tomorrow of a subcommittee which has been designated to consider a dozen resolutions calling for United States collaboration in an international post-war organization to maintain world peace.

As the senate foreign relations committee met to consider this and other resolutions, the Fulbright measure was attacked both by so-called internationalists and non-interventionists.

While those seeking a definite world organization with power to suppress aggressor nations contended that the Fulbright resolution was "weak" others contended that it gave a "blank check" to President Roosevelt in international affairs. The resolution passed the house by a vote of 360 to 29.

The Fulbright resolution declares that congress "hereby expressed itself as favoring creation of appropriate international machinery to establish and to maintain a just and lasting peace among the nations of the world, and as favoring participation by the United States therein within its constitutonal processes."

Sen. Ball (R) Minn., co-author of the Ball-Burton-Hill-Hatch resolution for a permanent United Nations organization and an international police force, said the resolution is unsatisfactory.

"The issue is not whether we will cooperate but the form and degree of cooperation," he said. "Until we spell those out we have not met the real issue."

Sen. Taft (R) Ohio, said:

"The Fulbright resolution is not satisfactory to me. It is so broad that it could include, and perhaps implies, an international state to which I am opposed and to which I think the entire country is opposed. I doubt if it will be considered in the senate."

WIDOW CLAIMED BY DEATH AT 84

Mrs. Effie Weidner Succumbs At Home Of Daughter.

Mrs. Effie M. Weidner, 84, widow of the late George H. Weidner, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ernest Koerper, Park avenue west road, early this morning following a lingering illness.

A life-long resident of Mansfield she was born here Dec. 9, 1859. She was a member of St. Luke's Lutheran church.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Koerper and Mrs. Guy C. Rebok; four grandchildren, Marguerite Koerper, Robert Koerper, Eugene Rebok, all of Mansfield; and Mrs. E. C. Amos of Knoxville, Tenn., and two great grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held from the Finefrock funeral home Friday at 2:30 p. m., with Rev. Herbert S. Garnes in charge. Burial will be in Mansfield cemetery.

ROOF BURNED

Oil Explosion Causes Damage at Sewage Disposal Plant.

Fire which started from an oil explosion in the crematory at the city garbage disposal plant last night burned through the roof of the building and threatened the entire structure before the flames were brought under control.

L. L. Linham, superintendent of the garbage department, said plant operations were halted only briefly and no one was injured. A. F. Reamsnider was the only employe in the plant when the oil exploded, Linham said.

Waste oil, frequently disposed of in the plant furnaces, "got out of control" started the fire, the plant superintendent explained. The explosion occurred shortly after 6:30 p. m., and firemen from Central and No. 4 stations worked nearly an hour before the fire was out. Estimate of the damage was withheld by Linham pending the report of an insurance investigator.

FRIDAY'S DAY

Tin Cans To Be Collected Then, City Says.

Those boxes of tin cans Mansfielders placed in front of their homes Monday, the day they thought the cans would be collected, will be picked up Friday throughout the city.

Old silk hosiery, also needed in the new salvage drive, should be turned in to downtown stores by Sept. 30 to make certain they will be shipped immediately to war centers where they are needed, civilian defense officials said.

School pupils will start a drive for waste paper, especially the heavy type and cardboard boxes, on Oct. 17.

The tin can collection, originally announced to extend over the entire week, has been reduced to one day at the suggestion of Mayor W. J. Locke, civilian defense chairman, who said it would require too many city workers and trucks to pick up the tin over a five-day period.

IN COURT ON BARBER CHARGE

Adam Horvath, 19 East Sixth street, was found guilty in municipal court today of barbering without a license and was fined $100 and costs, all of which was suspended on the condition that he doesn't work any more as a barber.

Horvath was cited on a complaint filed by Harold H. Allen, a state barber inspector, who testified that he watched Horvath shave a man last Saturday. Horvath said his customer was an elderly man who couldn't shave himself and he charged him nothing for the work.

Horvath was cited in 1938 on the same charge and at that time a $50 fine was suspended. His father, Nick Horvath, operates the shop, but he has been out of the city for the past three weeks, Horvath said.

COUNTY INMATE WINS RELEASE

Receives Parole as Chairman Warns Against Violation During Wartime.

Among the 33 inmates of Ohio Penitentiary granted paroles today by the state parole and pardon commission is Willis Harris, sentenced from Richland county for shooting with intent to wound.

Harris who was sentenced April 2, 1942, for not less than one and not more than 20 years will be released March 1.

In connection with the granting of paroles, Chairman Charles I. Sherwood said today former convicts returned to Ohio institutions as parole violators during wartime "can expect the minimum of consideration" from the commission.

"In critical times like these a paroled prisoner has the best possible opportunity to keep employed and make good," Sherwood remarked. "The commission has no patience with parole violators in wartime. They can expect the minimum of consideration in petitioning against for release on parole."

A parole effective Nov. 1 was granted to Wilbur L. Newmann of Findlay, former executive for the Ohio Oil company who was serving a one to 10 year sentence for embezzling $5,300 of company funds. He entered the pen last Oct. 6.

FAVORITE FOOD

IOWA CITY, Ia. —(INS)— Ice cream is the favorite food of the men who withstand the shellings, the bombings and the brutal attacks of the Japanese in the Southwest Pacific islands. Lieut. Loraine Ceagleske, chief nurse at the Iowa Navy Pre-Flight school here who experienced 16 months of hospital service throughout the central and south Pacific, says that when casualties were brought aboard her hospital ship, "we made ice cream around the clock but we always needed more."

WANTS BLANKET

TEXARKANA, Tex.—(U.P.)—The only thing the family of Lt. Frank N. Aten of Texarkana knows about the German prison camp where he is held is that it is plenty cold.

"Whatever you do," he wrote home, "send me either an Icelandic sleeping bag or a good blanket for I dread going through another winter and being as cold as I was this one."

NO HELP HERE

CLEVELAND —(INS)— Good Samaritans are few and far between these days, according to Eugene Bergman. In full view of some 40 persons, Bergman was thrown to the ground and robbed of $17 by three men, he reported to police. None of the bystanders lifted a finger to aid him, he said.

COMMENDED

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. —(U.P.)— Middle-aged folk are as productive as younger co-workers, according to the superintendent of a local war plant.

C. Edward Hjelm, plant chief for the Package Machinery company, said that oldsters not only produce as much, but exercise more caution on the job and cause less spoilage. Result: generally less accidents plus high quality work.

IRREGULARITY CONTINUES ON STOCK MARKET

Hope of Congressional Action on Post War Reserves Seen By Industry.

NEW YORK —(AP)— Stocks in early dealings today continued the irregular swings of the previous session and price changes were small.

Slightly higher at the opening were American Telephone, Standard Oil of California, United Aircraft and Southern Railway, Bethlehem Steel, Standard Oil (N.J.) and Oliver Farm were lower.

Iron Age in its weekly survey referred to questions of renegotiation and post war reserves for industry, a matter of considerable interest to holders of securities.

"The week brought brighter prospects," said the publication, "that congress might enact a bill providing for substantial postwar reserves, despite army-navy condemnation of allowing such reserves to come out of renegotiation or as deductions from taxes."

CHICAGO —(AP)— Grains declined slightly at the start today. A government report that corn in many areas was out of danger from frost brought in moderate liquidation.

Wheat opened ⅛ to ½ lower. December $1.48⅛-⅜, and rye was unchanged to ⅜ lower, December $1.06½-⅝.

aims of the measures were:

"The Japanese nation in all its classes and profession must fully understand the seriousness of the present internal and external situation and must be inspired by an unbending will to victory.

"The nation's entire strength must be concentrated on the armaments industry, especially on the strengthening of the Japanese air force.

"Strict self-sufficiency of Japan and Manchukuo as regards food supply must under all circumstances be assured.

"Plans for a thorough-going consolidation of the defenses of the Japanese motherland must be drawn up without delay."

The broadcast said all holidays were cancelled.

The mobilization of students would no longer be deferred, the broadcast continued, and the "employment of woman labor will be extended."

Allied Troops Speed Island Advance

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, Sept. 22—(AP)—Only two days after the fall of Lae, New Guinea, airborne troops of Gen. Douglas MacArthur seized a village 60 miles to the northwest while waves of American bombers wrecked airdromes, bridges, trucks and roads along a path of future conquest for 350 miles north.

The seizure of Kaiapit by transport-flown Australians last Saturday night, followed quickly the overrunning of Lae the previous Thursday, was disclosed in a communique today.

This new stroke, which the Japanese futilely tried to erase by counterattacks, and the latest air strikes with 97 tons of bombs and 120,000 rounds of ammunition all the way from south of Madang up to Wewak, clearly indicated the determination of MacArthur that his victories at Lae and Salamaua shall yield quick dividends.

Take Heavy Toll Of Jap Planes

CHUNGKING —(AP)— Fifteen Japanese bombers and two Zeros were destroyed and seven other bombers and two fighters were probably shot down Monday when a squadron of about 30 enemy bombers escorted by fighters attacked major installations of the 14th U.S.A.A.F. in China, a communique from Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters said today.

On the same day Mitchell bombers attacked docks and shipping installations at the Yangtze river port of Kiukiang and scored a hit on a 225-foot Japanese destroyer. The Allied planes returned safely.

Blast Jap Bases On Burma Front

NEW DELHI —(AP)— Royal Air Force fighter planes, sweeping over central Burma on offensive patrols yesterday, blasted Japanese rail and river transport in widely separated areas, a British communique said today. No planes were lost in the sweeps

Successful attacks were made on the railway north of Toungoo, where two troop trains were strafed and heavily damaged.

Mayor Says Phone Company's Line Removal Estimate 'Unearthly High.'

board's approval of release of materials to do the work, Hirsch said.

The cost figure he placed before the city may go higher if the telephone company has difficulty obtaining a right-of-way for new lines, he said. He added the city, which will own the land in the airport area, must assure the company that a right-of-way easement will be granted, or the cost figure can't be guaranteed.

Mayor Locke and J. R. Harrington, airport manager, wanted to know why the telephone company wouldn't benefit by the line and sub-station re-location, thereby enabling the firm to reduce its demands on the city.

Hirsch said the company was doing the work because the city had asked it and not because the company wants it done. The company doesn't consider the work an improvement, he said.

"We would prefer to have you move your airport to one side of State Route 13 and leave our lines as they are," he said. He added that there would be no circuit increases or changes involved in the line re-location.

Hirsch contended that the two railroad crossings on North Main street and Bowman street will retard any further growth of the city northward toward the airport and make it unlikely that the telephone company would have to supplement its service to that area in the next few years.

When the line re-location project is approved, most of the work could be done over the week-end when traffic is lightest and when service interruption will cause the least trouble, Hirsch said.

Last Friday, American Telephone and Telegraph representatives reached an agreement with the C. of C. airport committee on their part of the line removal program.

Mansfield Telephone officials who had been given notice of the meeting at the same time, were not prepared to provide the city with cost estimates. They requested an additional two weeks to prepare their estimates which were submitted today—four days after the first meeting.

Fighter Pilot Romance.

The hectic romance of a fighter pilot posing as an idle civilian on leave and a girl camera expert who tries to make him go to work, is gaily told in RKO Radio's new tunefilm for Fred Astaire and Joan Leslie, "The Sky's the Limit," now at the Ohio.

With the two stars exhibiting some spectacular dance routines and with its hit songs by Johnny Mercer and Harold Arlen, the film is said to be one of the season's most entertaining vehicles.

Abbott-Costello Film.

Comedians Bud Abbott and Lou Costello turn spy-chasers in their new musical comedy, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Rio Rita," now showing at the Ritz theater. They are aided in their latest escapade by Kathryn Grayson and John Carroll, who furnish the love interest and the songs. Patricia Dane, Tom Conway, Peter Whitney, Arthur Space and Dick Rich are the spies who are routed in a dramatic finale in a free-for-all-fight. "Rio Rita" and "The Ranger's Song" have been taken from the original musical, and several new numbers have been written especially for the production. The co-feature is "All By Myself."

Oberon, Aherne Star.

"First Comes Courage," the screen adaptation of Elliott Arnold's best-seller "The Commandos," will be presented by Columbia Pictures at the Madison theater, co-starring Merle Oberon and Brian Aherne. The film play is said to be a highly dramatic and realistic picturization of the brave spirit that strikes at the heart of a happy and peace-loving people when the merciless Nazi comes stalking into their midst. "Submarine Alert" is the co-feature.

HELL AND HIGH WATER

CHAPTER XXVIII

To distract the man's attention for a fraction of a second, Bob tossed out his hat. Before it struck the ground he was in the open. From Hickory's throat there came a strangled curse. The two guns roared, almost together. The outlaw's bullet chipped the rock wall close to the cowboy's ear. Bob thought that he too had missed. For a second shot boomed from Jake's rifle. Again Bob fired. The quarterbreed staggered forward drunkenly and the rifle slipped from his hands. The hinges of his knees gave way. He plowed into the rubble at his feet, shoulder first.

The crash of Bob's weapon filled the pass once more. He had aimed at one of the other brothers who had appeared at the entrance.

"Come back, Bob," the girl screamed.

Bob stepped back.

"Are you hurt?" Willie May cried, white to the lips.

"No. I think I killed Jake Hickory."

The calmness of his words, the harshness of his stern face, shocked her greatly. Terror flooded to her throat.

"Oh, Bob," she cried. "It's all my fault. If he had killed you—"

"He didn't." Bob cut her off curtly. "Get back to yore lookout. We'll work out of this all right."

She stared at him. "No," she promised humbly.

A threat volleyed up the pass. "We'll bump you off for this, Sugg, right now."

"You're not talking to Sugg." Bob answered. "I told you that before. I'm Bob Lee."

"That's a lie. How could Lee be there?"

"I climbed up the wall while you weren't looking and came down the runway into the pass. Better get outa here while you're still alive. I'm bad luck to the Hickorys."

"If you're Lee, show yourself. We won't hurt you."

"No thanks. I like it where I am. Stick around, Cass. All this shooting will bring some of our boys a-running. They'll be pleased to meet you."

Bob heard the sound of their voices for a few moments, diminishing with distance.

The sound of horses feet ringing over the rocky trail slowly died away. Bob, Willie May and the badly wounded Sugg were alone in the pass. Lee looked down the pass and saw no sign of their enemies, only the body of Jake sprawled in the rubble.

"They've lit out, I reckon," he told Willie May. "Keep an eye on the pass and I'll see if there is anything I can do for Sugg."

"They shot him as we came out of the pass," she explained. "After turning us loose and letting us start for home. We heard shooting after we left their camp. I think maybe the Hickorys killed the redbearded man Greer. He stood up for me."

Bob knelt beside the wounded man and opened his coat and shirt. One glance told him that Sugg was mortally hurt.

Sugg opened his eyes. There was a thin ironic smile on his lips. "No use," he murmured. "More than I can carry. Where is Miss Broderick?"

She put her arm under Sugg's head. To catch what he was saying she had to stoop close to his mouth.

She kissed him. "The way of the transgressor," he said, a word at a time. "Better I should go."

His head dropped on her arm. "He's dead," she told Bob, all the color driven from her face.

Bob looked down at him in silence. Willie May spoke aloud, more to herself than to her companion. "I thought I loved him. I couldn't believe that he . . . that he—"

Her voice broke. She turned her face to the rock wall, her body racked by dry sobs.

Young Lee said, very low: "He had so much. But it wasn't enough.

Somewhere in the distance something popped and after it another. Bob and Willie May looked at each other, waiting. But no other sound broke the quiet of the wilderness.

"The Hickorys met somebody, I reckon," he said. "I'll take a look from the top of the runway."

"Be careful. They might be trying to trap you."

He looked across the torn and ragged desert and presently made out a horseman riding toward the gap. "A black horse and a heavy-set rider."

She joined him. They watched the approaching rider for several minutes.

"It's Rush Greer," Willie May cried.

"So it is." Bob shifted the rifle in his hands.

"You don't need that," she assured him.

When he was near enough for his voice to carry he shouted to them. "Are you all right?"

Willie May walked forward to the cliff and looked down at him. Bob stood beside her.

"Yes. They attacked us and killed Mr. Sugg. Bob shot Jake Hickory. We heard two shots later.

"I started back when I heard the firing. From a ridge I saw them passing below. Bart and I swapped shots. He's lying back there dead."

Bob lowered the butt of his rifle to the ground. "You broke with them."

"We had a kinda rumpus," Greer answered, watching him closely.

"Miss Broderick says you stood up for her."

"What of it?" the outlaw asked sullenly.

"If you did, no J A B man has any quarrel with you. Better hole up till night and then cut south. You might make it."

"I might." Greer's voice was dry and sarcastic. "No guarantee, I reckon?"

"No guarantee," Bob replied.

"But all my best wishes," the girl cried. "And don't forget what I told you about coming to the ranch for work."

"After I get outa the pen," the bandit added with a twisted grin. "Well, I'll be saying 'Adios,' Miss." He gathered the bridle reins to go.

"Just a minute," Bob called quickly. "Cle Hightower is to be shot tomorrow for killing Sam Hickory. Did the Indian kill in self defense?"

Greer hesitated. It could neither help nor hurt him to tell the truth. He owed Cass Hickory nothing. Hightower meant nothing to him, but he felt no animosity toward the Choctaw.

"The Hickorys figured to get him, soon as he stepped into the store. I never saw the beat of it. All of us turned loose on him. He killed Sam and made a getaway. His luck certainly stood up."

"Not if he's hanged tomorrow." Bob weighed the problem. It would do no good to try to hold Greer. Under pressure he would repudiate what he had just said. "Would you write a line and sign it, saying Hightower was attacked and shot in self-defense? It might save him."

Greer's jangled laughter held no mirth. "That's good. Save him while yore friends hunt me down. Me, I'm playing a lone hand. He's got plenty helping him."

"No." The girl's voice rang out confidently. "You're not like the Hickory's. You risked your life to save me. I hope you get away. But maybe you won't. This may be your last chance to do something for an innocent man in trouble—and you are going to do it."

"All right." His tone showed annoyed impatience. "It's not worth fussing about. I'll do it for you, not him."

From his pocket he took a dirty note book and the stub of a pencil. He gnawed at the end of the pencil, while he thought what he would say. Slowly and laboriously, he wrote, then tore off the sheet.

"I'll leave it under this rock. You can come and get it after I've gone."

He turned and rode away, a graceless ill-favored miscreant. Not once did he look back.

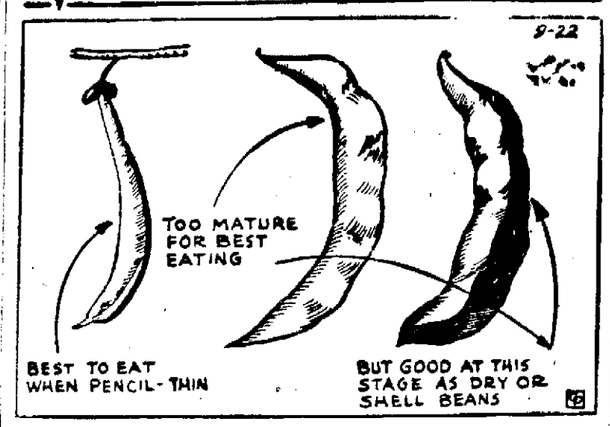
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Harvesting Beans In the Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
(Released by Central Press Ass'n.)

The Victory gardener who planted early bush beans for the first pickings, and pole beans for mid-season and late pickings, with a third planting as late as the first week of August (especially the early maturing varieties should have ample amounts of beans for the table and canning until the plants are completely killed by frost.

When beans are permitted to dry on the vine, production halts. If the pods are kept picked, the bearing season is prolonged. A good picking plan is to go over the plants every few days. Some varieties of beans become stringy unless used when young.

As illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, beans are at their best when streamlined, or in other words, pencil-thin and still smooth of shape. When, however, beans become too mature to use as snap beans, which condition is indicated by the bulge of the seeds, they can be opened and the bean seeds can then be used to advantage as shell dry beans.

The Mexican bean beetle feeds voraciously on late bean plants, therefore extra precautions must be taken to protect the plants against these enemies. Dusting with a rotenone dust is one of the best safeguards.

CARRIERS BUSY

WASHINGTON —(INS)— In the current hell of war, modern Gunga Dins are "squattin' on the coals, giving drinks to poor damned souls" as did Kipling's immortal water carrier, according to a report by the Geological Survey to Secretary of the Interior Ickes. Water is the number one "must" of the fighting men.

When the invasion of North Africa took place, the report said, geologists went ashore with the first landing troops. When the troops went into action with machine guns, the scientific "water boys" were active too—with drills and pumps.

Amazing results in building STURDY BODIES!

1—Promote the flow of vital digestive juices in the stomach

2—Energize your body with RICH, RED BLOOD!

YOUNG people, especially those of grammar and high school age, are prone to be deficient in stomach digestive juices and red-blood.

A growing-person who is operating on a 65 to 70% healthy blood volume or a stomach digestive capacity of only 50 to 60% normal is severely handicapped.

In such cases Nature needs extra help. Organic troubles or focal infection, if they exist, must be corrected. Tissue foods must be digested and rich, red-blood must be present to build sturdy bodies.

SSS Tonic is especially designed to build-up BLOOD STRENGTH when deficient . . . and to promote those STOMACH JUICES which digest the food so the body can make proper use of it in tissue building and repair.

These two important results enable the body to make use of the food as Nature intended. Thus you may gain a keen appetite . . . firm flesh . . . body energy . . . mental alertness!

Build Sturdy Health and Help America Win

Thousands and thousands of users have testified to the benefits SSS Tonic has brought to them and scientific research shows that it gets results—that's why so many say "SSS Tonic builds sturdy health—makes you feel like yourself again." At drug stores in 10 and 20 oz. sizes. S.S.S.Co

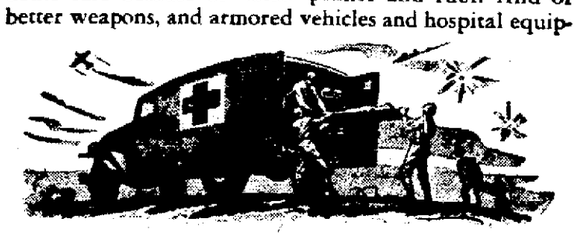
HAROLD BOOSINGER has come back to us—with wounds and campaign ribbons. He could tell you about brave American boys fighting . . . and dying. He knows now what things win a war . . . there and here.

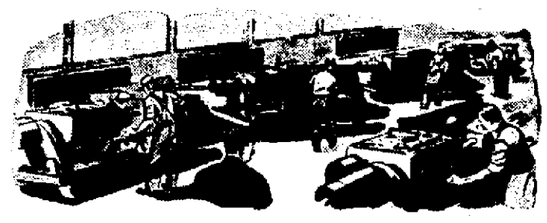
This young veteran served almost a year as flight surgeon's assistant in India and China . . . survived Jap bombings of a base hospital area . . . helped to save lives . . . saw other men die.

He's back at his old stand today, a SOHIOAN again, assistant manager of a SOHIO Servicenter "Somewhere in Cleveland," the first to return home of over 1600 SOHIOANS-in-Service.

He could tell you, for instance, of blood plasma from America's home front erasing the chalk-gray of approaching death from the faces of wounded men. Twice your blood saved his life—once from malaria, again from shrapnel wounds.

He could tell you, after 70,000 miles of war travel, of U. S. Air Force pilots having a better chance of coming home safe because of better planes and fuel. And of better weapons, and armored vehicles and hospital equipment—all of it winning this fight for freedom around the globe. Fighting materials for fighting men, built by the untiring toil of the men and women of the home front. And he could tell you, too, what your purchase of War Bonds buys—for he saw and used those vital tools of war.





And Harold Boosinger—veteran of World War II—would tell you today to keep working, keep saving, keep fighting at home—because the big job of complete victory still lies ahead!

GERMANS APPLY TORCH, BEGIN TO LEAVE NAPLES

Throw Up Defenses Around City to Slow Advance of 5th Army Toward Port.

stayed there three or four days, sending back what the military spokesman called "very valuable information of every German activity in and around Potenza, all of which was instrumental in our capture of the town."

Capture of Campagna carried the American forces 20 miles inland from Salerno to a point about six miles northeast of Eboli, capture of which was announced yesterday.

San Cipriano is about eight miles northeast of Salerno and Montecorvino is about 12 miles east of Salerno.

The town of Potenza, which fell to the Eighth army, is a vital road junction approximately 50 miles due east of Salerno and midway between Italy's eastern and western coasts. It is more than 50 miles from the Gulf of Taranto.

The northwest African airforce continued to smash at targets in the battle zone, at communications behind the enemy lines, and at harbor installations at Leghorn and Bastia, on the northern end of Corsica. Only two Allied planes were reported missing.

Operations in the Leghorn-Corsica area were patently in support of French troops on the French island and were designed to prevent the Nazis from reinforcing the island garrison.

The sky over Naples, meanwhile, was dark with smoke, and from Allied positions across the bay it appeared the Nazis were continuing the program of fire and demolition from the security of their hastily-organized defensive ring around the city.

Refugees passing through the Allied lines confirmed the Allied belief that the Germans were looting and destroying the city, perhaps as a step toward new withdrawals. The refugees said that the Nazis had instituted a reign of terror with thousands of Neapolitans dying within the last few weeks for violations of a stringent German curfew edict.

A French general headquarters communique last night disclosed that more than half of Corsica was already in the hands of the French army and Corsican patriots who led the revolt.

The Germans, the bulletin said, had been driven into the coastal areas on the eastern side of the island with the French troops closing in rapidly.

Further trouble for the hunted Germans came from Allied planes which sought to cut off the last avenues of escape or reinforcement by the bombing of Bastia.

RAF and RCAF Wellingtons as well as American Liberators from the Britain-based Eighth U. S. A. A. F., which have now arrived in Africa, joined in the concentrated attack on the Corsican port and on Leghorn, across the Ligurian sea on the Italian mainland.

Thus the Germans were reported to be caught between the air squeeze on the escape port of Bastia and the rapidly advancing French, who were closing in on Bonifacio and Porto Vecchio on the southeast and southern coasts.

Germans Admit Balkan Uprising

LONDON—(U.P.)—Germany acknowledged officially today an attempt by "Slovenian rebels and Italian Communists" to seize control of northeastern Italy and northwestern Yugoslavia, reporting that the "rebels are plundering and pillaging."

A Berlin communique admitting a powerful uprising against Nazi authority coincided with a report from Yugoslav patriots that they had thrust 22 miles into Italy to capture Gorizia and had occupied the Peljasao peninsula below Split, and three more Adriatic islands.

Spring Date Seen For Invasion of Europe

LONDON—(A.P.)—An Allied invasion of the Balkans this year, followed by a full-scale assault on western Europe next spring, now seems probable in the light of Prime Minister Churchill's war review in commons yesterday and developments on the fighting fronts.

Despite a vast improvement in the Allied shipping position and Gen. George C. Marshall's assertion in Omaha that American military forces are ready to carry the attack to the enemy with "power and force," there is a general feeling in London that a front in western Europe cannot be opened before next year unless the German army suddenly cracks wide open.

On the other hand an official announcement in Cairo that Allied forces had occupied the Aegean island of Coo (Cos), Lero and Samos strengthened a growing belief here that a thrust into the Balkans is imminent.

Allied Planes Roar Across Channel Again

LONDON—(A.P.)—Two big formations of Allied planes roared out over the Strait of Dover this morning to attack objectives on the continent in a continuation of the daylight air offensive.

The last large-scale raids were last Thursday when Flying Fortresses hit Nantes and RAF night bombers struck at the modane Alpine tunnel.

American Marauders have borne the brunt of the aerial warfare of the last three days out of four, raining destruction on German airbases.

German air raiders scattered a few bombs over East Anglia and southeast England last night, causing some damage and casualties, the Ministry of Home Security announced today.

British Planes Hit Germans In Greece

CAIRO —(A.P.)— British planes from the middle east bombed German airdromes near Athens in Greece and on the islands of Crete and Rhodes in the eastern Mediterranean Monday night, Allied headquarters announced here today.

The targets included the airdrome at Hassani, near Athens, Heraklion on Crete and Maritza on the island of Rhodes. Two planes were reported missing.

BOND DRIVE 75 PER CENT OVER

Purchases Take Spurt With $4,450,776 Raised Toward County Goal.

army's "back the attack" bond show in Washington.

"It is desirable that the American people, by successful participation in the war loan in the United States, promote the joint effort of the Allies to achieve victory over the bitter enemy within the shortest time," the message read.

In the national bond drive picture today yesterday's sales were listed at $425,000,000 and the treasury reported a 13-day total of $11,170,000,000, near the three-quarter mark.

Eight states have filled more than 75 per cent of their quotas. Maryland leads with 107 per cent, followed by Rhode Island with 98, New York with 86, Ohio 85, Minnesota 79, Illinois 76, New Hampshire 76 and West Virginia 76. Twenty-two other states have passed the half-way mark.

MYSTERY OVER MARSHALL AND M'ARTHUR GAINS

Chief of Staff Now Reported Due To Command Allies All Over World.

for next year's expected invasion of western Europe from British bases. Among some of Marshall's associates and in congress there began gradually to develop alarm and a determination to oppose his re-assignment.

Outward manifestations of that alarm and determination came last week-end, notably in an Army and Navy Journal editoral decrying such a move and asserting that powerful forces sought to get Marshall out of Washington.

The editorial had considerable impact here. That was especially true in congress where Marshall's prestige is enormous and where there is strong feeling that he is more essential as chief of staff than as a battle general in Europe, or anywhere.

The first current whisper of a global command for Marshall came late last week in several conversations here. As long ago as last January there was current among some responsible administration members a belief that Marshall was in line for such a post. But there were no developments.

One interpretation placed here on reports of the sudden and vigorous revival of such a plan is that public discussion of Marshall's possible transfer to an Allied command limited to Europe was arousing too much opposition therefore, it is suggested it was desirable to make the proposed new post so attractive that none could challenge the propriety of the shift.

The president's military advisers—or some of them—are understood to have argued that Marshall is invaluable where he is. That for him to undertake all or part of his chief of staff responsibilities from a London headquarters would be a mistake because Washington is the natural center for a global war. London was opposed as too far from our Pacific theater.

Substantially those arguments are believed to have been put vigorously to Mr. Roosevelt within the past week.

Although the Army and Navy Journal and other publications have charged that certain forces were attempting to oust Marshall as chief of staff—kick him upstairs—there has been no public identification of those forces other than some congressional finger-pointing at the British.

But, persuasively authentic is the word passing around Washington today that one of the principal advocates and possibly the originator of the idea to make Marshall a fighting general was a member of Mr. Roosevelt's cabinet.

It was argued by this advocate that a battle assignment would make Marshall the Pershing of World War II—that is, that it would make him at war's end our No. 1 military hero. There are a great many persons who now rate MacArthur as our No. 1 military hero.

Other than that, Mr. Roosevelt has been contemplating new duties for Marshall. The idea that he might be assigned to a global command of all Anglo-American armed forces was received here with as much doubt as credence. And whatever forces may be nudging to get Marshall out of his present job, there has been no hint here that Mr. Roosevelt thought of Marshall other than as the most competent soldier in the United States army.

If the president sends him anywhere, the odds are as long as from here to normalcy that it will be with the idea of giving him a bigger job and better opportunities. It does not follow, however, that there would not be sharp congressional criticism of any such move or that professional military men would agree that it was wise.

MacArthur Relegated To Background, Belief

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Southwest Pacific — (U.P.) — Gen. Douglas MacArthur implied today in a carefully worded statement that his command and his strategy of direct strokes against Japan have been shoved into the background of the Pacific war in favor of an "island hopping" campaign involving "extravagant losses and slow progress."

The tenor of the statement left no doubt MacArthur felt he had been given a secondary place in the war against Japan.

"However, subordinate may be my role," he said, "I hope to play it manfully . . . I have no personal military ambitions whatsoever and am perfectly content in such a role as may be prescribed for me."

Observers regarded MacArthur's statement, which was issued in answer to press reports from the United States and Britain implying his command would be reduced to a secondary and subsidiary role, as meaning:

1. He had been informed that the southeast Asia command, decided upon by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill at Quebec and headed by Lord Louis Montbatten, would get first call for a drive into Burma.

2. His repeated requests for men and materials and his plans to strike with "massive" strength for his avowed goal—the Philippines—and move swiftly against Japan had been rejected.

NEW TAX PLAN GIVEN TO FDR

It Would Withhold 30 Per Cent Instead of 20 But Provide For Post-War Refund.

ed for from equal increases in corporation and excise levies.

The income tax phase entails increases in all brackets but most notably a 100 per cent jump in the present 13 per cent first bracket surtax. However, the present 3 per cent (net) victory tax would be integrated in that levy, together with provision for a 50 per cent postwar refund.

Thus the basic rate—now 6 per cent normal, plus 13 per cent first bracket surtax, plus 3 per cent net victory tax, a total of 22 per cent—would be 6 per cent plus 26 per cent, a total of 32 per cent. Of that amount, however, 13 per cent would be paid back after the war.

Shoulud Mr. Roosevelt reject the program, Treasury Secretary Morgenthau probably will offer an alternative proposal calling for stiff increases in social security taxes. These are 1 per cent for both employer and employe but are scheduled to double Jan. 1 unless congress acts as it has before to postpone the increase.

CHAPTER XXVIII

To distract the man's attention for a fraction of a second, Bob tossed out his hat. Before it struck the ground he was in the open. From Hickory's throat there came a strangled curse. The two guns roared, almost together. The outlaw's bullet chipped the rock wall close to the cowboy's ear. Bob thought that he too had missed. For a second shot boomed from Jake's rifle. Again Bob fired. The quarterbreed staggered forward drunkenly and the rifle slipped from his hands. The hinges of his knees gave way. He plowed into the rubble at his feet, shoulder first.

The crash of Bob's weapon filled the pass once more. He had aimed at one of the other brothers who had appeared at the entrance.

"Come back, Bob," the girl screamed.

Bob stepped back.

"Are you hurt?" Willie May cried, white to the lips.

"No. I think I killed Jake Hickory."

The calmness of his words, the harshness of his stern face, shocked her greatly. Terror flooded to her throat.

"Oh, Bob," she cried. "It's all my fault. If he had killed you—"

"He didn't." Bob cut her off curtly. "Get back to yore lookout. We'll work out of this all right."

She stared at him. "No," she promised humbly.

A threat volleyed up the pass. "We'll bump you off for this, Sugg, right now."

"You're not talking to Sugg," Bob answered. "I told you that before. I'm Bob Lee."

"That's a lie. How could Lee be there?"

"I climbed up the wall while you weren't looking and came down the runway into the pass. Better get outa here while you're still alive. I'm bad luck to the Hickorys."

"If you're Lee, show yourself. We won't hurt you."

"No thanks. I like it where I am. Stick around, Cass. All this shooting will bring some of our boys a-running. They'll be pleased to meet you."

Bob heard the sound of their voices for a few moments, diminishing with distance.

The sound of horses feet ringing over the rocky trail slowly died away. Bob, Willie May and the badly wounded Sugg were alone in the pass. Lee looked down the pass and saw no sign of their enemies, only the body of Jake sprawled in the rubble.

"They've lit out, I reckon," he told Willie May. "Keep an eye on the pass and I'll see if there is anything I can do for Sugg."

"They shot him as we came out of the pass," she explained. "After turning us loose and letting us start for home. We heard shooting after we left their camp. I think maybe the Hickorys killed the redbearded man Greer. He stood up for me."

Bob knelt beside the wounded man and opened his coat and shirt. One glance told him that Sugg was mortally hurt.

Sugg opened his eyes. There was a thin ironic smile on his lips. "No use," he murmured. "More than I can carry. Where is Miss Broderick?"

She put her arm under Sugg's head. To catch what he was saying she had to stoop close to his mouth.

She kissed him. "The way of the transgressor," he said, a word at a time. "Better I should go."

His head dropped on her arm. "He's dead," she told Bob, all the color driven from her face.

Bob looked down at him in silence. Willie May spoke aloud, more to herself than to her companion. "I thought I loved him. I couldn't believe that he . . . that he—"

Her voice broke. She turned her face to the rock wall, her body racked by dry sobs.

Young Lee said, very low: "He had so much. But it wasn't enough.

Somewhere in the distance something popped and after it another. Bob and Willie May looked at each other, waiting. But no other sound broke the quiet of the wilderness.

"The Hickorys met somebody, I reckon," he said. "I'll take a look from the top of the runway."

"Be careful. They might be trying to trap you."

He looked across the torn and ragged desert and presently made out a horseman riding toward the gap. "A black horse and a heavy-set rider."

She joined him. They watched the approaching rider for several minutes.

"It's Rush Greer," Willie May cried.

"So it is." Bob shifted the rifle in his hands.

"You don't need that," she assured him.

When he was near enough for his voice to carry he shouted to them. "Are you all right?"

Willie May walked forward to the cliff and looked down at him. Bob stood beside her.

"Yes. They attacked us and killed Mr. Sugg. Bob shot Jake Hickory. We heard two shots later.

"I started back when I heard the firing. From a ridge I saw them passing below. Bart and I swapped shots. He's lying back there dead."

Bob lowered the butt of his rifle to the ground. "You broke with them."

"We had a kinda rumpus," Greer answered, watching him closely.

"Miss Broderick says you stood up for her."

"What of it?" the outlaw asked sullenly.

"If you did, no J A B man has any quarrel with you. Better hole up till night and then cut south. You might make it."

"I might." Greer's voice was dry and sarcastic. "No guarantee, I reckon?"

"No guarantee," Bob replied. "But all my best wishes," the girl cried. "And don't forget what I told you about coming to the ranch for work."

"After I get outa the pen," the bandit added with a twisted grin. "Well, I'll be saying 'Adios,' Miss." He gathered the bridle reins to go.

"Just a minute," Bob called quickly. "Cle Hightower is to be shot tomorrow for killing Sam Hickory. Did the Indian kill in self defense?"

Greer hesitated. It could neither help nor hurt him to tell the truth. He owed Cass Hickory nothing. Hightower meant nothing to him, but he felt no animosity toward the Choctaw.

"The Hickorys figured to get him, soon as he stepped into the store. I never saw the beat of it. All of us turned loose on him. He killed Sam and made a getaway. His luck certainly stood up."

"Not if he's hanged tomorrow." Bob weighed the problem. It would do no good to try to hold Greer. Under pressure he would repudiate what he had just said. "Would you write a line and sign it, saying Hightower was attacked and shot in self-defense? It might save him."

Greer's jangled laughter held no mirth. "That's good. Save him while yore friends hunt me down. Me, I'm playing a lone hand. He's got plenty helping him."

"No." The girl's voice rang out confidently. "You're not like the Hickory's. You risked your life to save me. I hope you get away. But maybe you won't. This may be your last chance to do something for an innocent man in trouble—and you are going to do it."

"All right." His tone showed annoyed impatience. "It's not worth fussing about. I'll do it for you, not him."

From his pocket he took a dirty note book and the stub of a pencil. He gnawed at the end of the pencil, while he thought what he would say. Slowly and laboriously, he wrote, then tore off the sheet.

"I'll leave it under this rock. You can come and get it after I've gone."

He turned and rode away, a graceless ill-favored miscreant. Not once did he look back.

Amazing results in building STURDY BODIES!

1—Promote the flow of vital digestive juices in the stomach

2—Energize your body with RICH, RED BLOOD!

YOUNG people, especially those of grammar and high school age, are prone to be deficient in stomach digestive juices and red-blood.

A growing-person who is operating on a 65 to 70% healthy blood volume or a stomach digestive capacity of only 50 to 60% normal is severely handicapped.

In such cases Nature needs extra help. Organic troubles or focal infection, if they exist, must be corrected. Tissue foods must be digested and rich, red-blood must be present to build sturdy bodies.

SSS Tonic is especially designed to build-up BLOOD STRENGTH when deficient . . . and to promote those STOMACH JUICES which digest the food so the body can make proper use of it in tissue building and repair.

These two important results enable the body to make use of the food as Nature intended. Thus you may gain a keen appetite . . . firm flesh . . . body energy . . . mental alertness!

Build Sturdy Health and Help America Win

Thousands and thousands of users have testified to the benefits SSS Tonic has brought to them and scientific research shows that it gets results—that's why so many say "SSS Tonic builds sturdy health—makes you feel like yourself again." At drug stores in 10 and 20 oz. sizes. ©S.S.S.Co

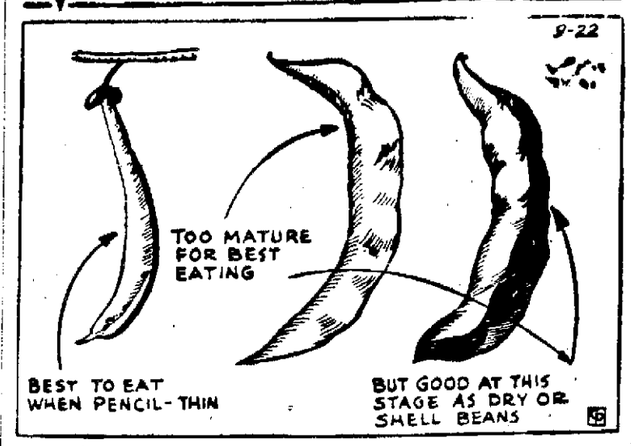
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Harvesting Beans In the Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
(Released by Central Press Ass'n.)

The Victory gardener who planted early bush beans for the first pickings, and pole beans for mid-season and late pickings, with a third planting as late as the first week of August (especially the early maturing varieties) should have ample amounts of beans for the table and canning until the plants are completely killed by frost.

When beans are permitted to dry on the vine, production halts. If the pods are kept picked, the bearing season is prolonged. A good picking plan is to go over the plants every few days. Some varieties of beans become stringy unless used when young.

As illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, beans are at their best when streamlined, or in other words, pencil-thin and still smooth of shape. When, however, beans become too mature to use as snap beans, which condition is indicated by the bulge of the seeds, they can be opened and the bean seeds can then be used to advantage as shell dry beans.

The Mexican bean beetle feeds voraciously on late bean plants, therefore extra precautions must be taken to protect the plants against these enemies. Dusting with a rotenone dust is one of the best safeguards.

CARRIERS BUSY

WASHINGTON —(INS)— In the current hell of war, modern Gunga Dins are "squattin' on the coals, giving drinks to poor damned souls" as did Kipling's immortal water carrier, according to a report by the Geological Survey to Secretary of the Interior Ickes. Water is the number one "must" of the fighting men.

When the invasion of North Africa took place, the report said, geologists went ashore with the first landing troops. When the troops went into action with machine guns, the scientific "water boys" were active too—with drills and pumps.

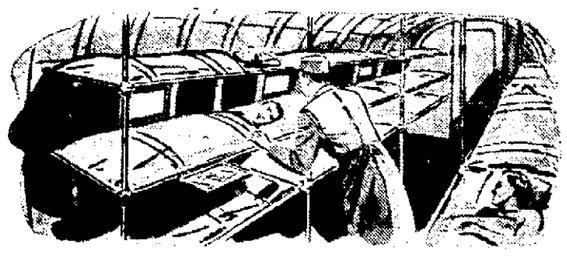
HAROLD BOOSINGER has come back to us—with wounds and campaign ribbons. He could tell you about brave American boys fighting . . . and dying. He knows now what things win a war . . . there and here.

This young veteran served almost a year as flight surgeon's assistant in India and China . . . survived Jap bombings of a base hospital area . . . helped to save lives . . . saw other men die.

He's back at his old stand today, a SOHIOAN again, assistant manager of a SOHIO Servicenter "Somewhere in Cleveland," the first to return home of over 1600 SOHIOANS-in-Service.



He could tell you, for instance, of blood plasma from America's home front erasing the chalk-gray of approaching death from the faces of wounded men. Twice your blood saved his life—once from malaria, again from shrapnel wounds.

He could tell you, after 70,000 miles of war travel, of U. S. Air Force pilots having a better chance of coming home safe because of better planes and fuel. And of better weapons, and armored vehicles and hospital equipment—all of it winning this fight for freedom around the globe. Fighting materials for fighting men, built by the untiring toil of the men and women of the home front. And he could tell you, too, what your purchase of War Bonds buys—for he saw and used those vital tools of war.

And Harold Boosinger—veteran of World War II—would tell you today to keep working, keep saving, keep fighting at home—because the big job of complete victory still lies ahead!

GERMANS APPLY TORCH, BEGIN TO LEAVE NAPLES

Throw Up Defenses Around City to Slow Advance of 5th Army Toward Port.

stayed there three or four days, sending back what the military spokesman called "very valuable information of every German activity in and around Potenza, all of which was instrumental in our capture of the town."

Capture of Campagna carried the American forces 20 miles inland from Salerno to a point about six miles northeast of Eboli, capture of which was announced yesterday.

San Cipriano is about eight miles northeast of Salerno and Montecorvino is about 12 miles east of Salerno.

The town of Potenza, which fell to the Eighth army, is a vital road junction approximately 50 miles due east of Salerno and midway between Italy's eastern and western coasts. It is more than 50 miles from the Gulf of Taranto.

The northwest African airforce continued to smash at targets in the battle zone, at communications behind the enemy lines, and at harbor installations at Leghorn and Bastia, on the northern end of Corsica. Only two Allied planes were reported missing.

Operations in the Leghorn-Corsica area were patently in support of French troops on the French island and were designed to prevent the Nazis from reinforcing the island garrison

The sky over Naples, meanwhile, was dark with smoke, and from Allied positions across the bay it appeared the Nazis were continuing the program of fire and demolition from the security of their hastily-organized defensive ring around the city

Refugees passing through the Allied lines confirmed the Allied belief that the Germans were looting and destroying the city, perhaps as a step toward new withdrawals. The refugees said that the Nazis had instituted a reign of terror with thousands of Neapolitans dying within the last few weeks for violations of a stringent German curfew edict.

A French general headquarters communique last night disclosed that more than half of Corsica was already in the hands of the French army and Corsican patriots who led the revolt.

The Germans, the bulletin said, had been driven into the coastal areas on the eastern side of the island with the French troops closing in rapidly.

Further trouble for the hunted Germans came from Allied planes which sought to cut off the last avenues of escape or reinforcement by the bombing of Bastia

RAF and RCAF Wellingtons as well as American Liberators from the Britain-based Eighth U. S. A. A. F., which have now arrived in Africa, joined in the concentrated attack on the Corsican port and on Leghorn, across the Ligurian sea on the Italian mainland

Thus the Germans were reported to be caught between the air squeeze on the escape port of Bastia and the rapidly advancing French, who were closing in on Bonifacio and Porto Vecchio on the southeast and southern coasts

Germans Admit Balkan Uprising

LONDON—(U P)—Germany acknowledged officially today an attempt by "Slovenian rebels and Italian Communists" to seize control of northeastern Italy and northwestern Yugoslavia, reporting that the "rebels are plundering and pillaging."

A Berlin communique admitting a powerful uprising against Nazi authority coincided with a report from Yugoslav patriots that they had thrust 22 miles into Italy to capture Gorizia and had occupied the Peljasao peninsula below Split, and three more Adriatic islands

Spring Date Seen For Invasion of Europe

LONDON—(AP)—An Allied invasion of the Balkans this year, followed by a full-scale assault on western Europe next spring, now seems probable in the light of Prime Minister Churchill's war review in commons yesterday and developments on the fighting fronts.

Despite a vast improvement in the Allied shipping position and Gen. George C. Marshall's assertion in Omaha that American military forces are ready to carry the attack to the enemy with "power and force," there is a general feeling in London that a front in western Europe cannot be opened before next year unless the German army suddenly cracks wide open

On the other hand an official announcement in Cairo that Allied forces had occupied the Aegean island of Coo (Cos), Lero and Samos strengthened a growing belief here that a thrust into the Balkans is imminent.

Allied Planes Roar Across Channel Again

LONDON—(AP)—Two big formations of Allied planes roared out over the Strait of Dover this morning to attack objectives on the continent in a continuation of the daylight air offensive.

The last large-scale raids were last Thursday when Flying Fortresses hit Nantes and RAF night bombers struck at the modane Alpine tunnel

American Marauders have borne the brunt of the aerial warfare of the last three days out of four, raining destruction on German airbases

German air raiders scattered a few bombs over East Anglia and southeast England last night causing some damage and casualties, the Ministry of Home Security announced today.

British Planes Hit Germans In Greece

CAIRO —(AP)— British planes from the middle east bombed German airdromes near Athens in Greece and on the islands of Crete and Rhodes in the eastern Mediterranean Monday night, Allied headquarters announced here today.

The targets included the airdrome at Hassani, near Athens, Heraklion on Crete and Maritza on the island of Rhodes Two planes were reported missing.

MYSTERY OVER MARSHALL AND M'ARTHUR GAINS

Chief of Staff Now Reported Due To Command Allies All Over World.

for next year's expected invasion of western Europe from British bases. Among some of Marshall's associates and in congress there began gradually to develop alarm and a determination to oppose his re-assignment.

Outward manifestations of that alarm and determination came last week-end notably in an Army and Navy Journal editoral decrying such a move and asserting that powerful forces sought to get Marshall out of Washington

The editorial had considerable impact here. That was especially true in congress where Marshall's prestige is enormous and where there is strong feeling that he is more essential as chief of staff than as a battle general in Europe, or anywhere.

The first current whisper of a global command for Marshall came late last week in several conversations here. As long ago as last January there was current among some responsible administration members a belief that Marshall was in line for such a post. But there were no developments.

One interpretation placed here on reports of the sudden and vigorous revival of such a plan is that public discussion of Marshall's possible transfer to an Allied command limited to Europe was arousing too much opposition therefore, it is suggested it was desirable to make the proposed new post so attractive that none could challenge the propriety of the shift

The president's military advisers—or some of them—are understood to have argued that Marshall is invaluable where he is. That for him to undertake all or part of his chief of staff responsibilities from a London headquarters would be a mistake because Washington is the natural center for a global war. London was opposed as too far from our Pacific theater.

Substantially those arguments are believed to have been put vigorously to Mr. Roosevelt within the past week.

Although the Army and Navy Journal and other publications have charged that certain forces were attempting to oust Marshall as chief of staff—kick him upstairs—there has been no public identification of those forces other than some congressional finger-pointing at the British.

But, persuasively authentic is the word passing around Washington today that one of the principal advocates and possibly the originator of the idea to make Marshall a fighting general was a member of Mr. Roosevelt's cabinet.

It was argued by this advocate that a battle assignment would make Marshall the Pershing of World War II—that is, that it would make him at war's end our No. 1 military hero. There are a great many persons who now rate MacArthur as our No. 1 military hero.

Other than that, Mr. Roosevelt has been contemplating new duties for Marshall. The idea that he might be assigned to a global command of all Anglo-American armed forces was received here with as much doubt as credence. And whatever forces may be nudging to get Marshall out of his present job, there has been no hint here that Mr. Roosevelt thought of Marshall other than as the most competent soldier in the United States army.

If the president sends him anywhere, the odds are as long as from here to normalcy that it will be with the idea of giving him a bigger job and better opportunities. It does not follow, however, that there would not be sharp congressional criticism of any such move or that professional military men would agree that it was wise.

MacArthur Relegated To Background, Belief

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Southwest Pacific — (U P) — Gen Douglas MacArthur implied today in a carefully worded statement that his command and his strategy of direct strokes against Japan have been shoved into the background of the Pacific war in favor of an "island hopping" campaign involving "extravagant losses and slow progress."

The tenor of the statement left no doubt MacArthur felt he had been given a secondary place in the war against Japan.

"However, subordinate may be my role," he said, "I hope to play it manfully . . . I have no personal military ambitions whatsoever and am perfectly content in such a role as may be prescribed for me."

Observers regarded MacArthur's statement, which was issued in answer to press reports from the United States and Britain implying his command would be reduced to a secondary and subsidiary role, as meaning:

1. He had been informed that the southeast Asia command, decided upon by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill at Quebec and headed by Lord Louis Montbatten, would get first call for a drive into Burma.

2. His repeated requests for men and materials and his plans to strike with "massive" strength for his avowed goal—the Philippines—and move swiftly against Japan had been rejected.

NEW TAX PLAN GIVEN TO FDR

It Would Withhold 30 Per Cent Instead of 20 But Provide For Post-War Refund.

ed for from equal increases in corporation and excise levies.

The income tax phase entails increases in all brackets but most notably a 100 per cent jump in the present 13 per cent first bracket surtax. However, the present 3 per cent (net) victory tax would be integrated in that levy, together with provision for a 50 per cent postwar refund.

Thus the basic rate—now 6 per cent normal, plus 13 per cent first bracket surtax, plus 3 per cent net victory tax, a total of 22 per cent—would be 6 per cent plus 26 per cent, a total of 32 per cent Of that amount, however, 13 per cent would be paid back after the war.

Shoulud Mr. Roosevelt reject the program, Treasury Secretary Morgenthau probably will offer an alternative proposal calling for stiff increases in social security taxes. These are 1 per cent for both employer and employe but are scheduled to double Jan. 1 unless congress acts as it has before to postpone the increase.

Chapter II of Allied Book

WINSTON CHURCHILL'S statement to the house of commons in London yesterday might be called Chapter II of the Story of Quebec.

Chapter I was given last week when President Roosevelt informed congress in his message that the Quebec conference had determined the "time and place" for new blows against the Axis.

Churchill told commons yesterday, as Chapter II of the story, that a mass invasion of Europe would begin "at the right time."

He emphasized also that the invasion would be in western Europe, which means across the channel into the Low Countries or France.

The invasion of Italy was never considered by Britian and the United States, he said, as anything more than a preliminary to a much larger, more dangerous and more costly undertaking.

From that, the Russians may take renewed hope that the second front for which they have been clamoring will not be long in coming. The Soviets have taken the firm stand that neither the North African campaign nor the Italian invasion constituted a real second front, and have insisted that United States and Britain should invade across the channel and thus force the Nazis to withdraw some of their troop concentrations from the Russian front.

From Churchill's statement to commons, it looks as though the Russians are going to get what they want—but only when Allied military commanders decide it is the "right time."

Several points in Churchill's address pointed to closer collaboration with Russia. One was the announcement that a tri-power conference would take place in the near future. Another was his revelation that Russia had approved the surrender terms imposed on Italy.

Thus as war plans move forward, so also does the effort to reach a closer agreement with Russia, thus speeding, it is to be hoped, common strategy for final victory.

President Roosevelt's message to congress contained nothing but bad news for the Axis. Churchill's talk to commons makes the medicine a little more bitter.

Future German Leaders

WHERE will Germany find its leaders after the war and the downfall of Hitlerism? The United Nations cannot sit on Germany forever. Sooner or later they must entrust the country to some of its own sons. Where will they find them?

Perhaps in the concentration camps. There is, for example, Pastor Martin Niemoeller, the former submarine commander whose conscience would not let him compromise with Hitler, and who has been in prison ever since.

Perhaps among the exiles. Two former chancellors or heads of the country are still alive abroad: Heinrich Wirth, twice chancellor, and a member of the Bruning government, the last to be run by honorable gentlemen, and Heinrich Bruning himself. Bruning is now a professor of politics at Harvard, and may not care to leave that peaceful life. Both were members of the Centre or Catholic party, so might not receive the full support of North or Protestant Germany. However, either is respected and trustworthy, and are familiar names to Germans weary of the Nazis.

A government by exiles is notoricusly hard to set up, and harder to get the confidence of those who stayed at home. Yet no doubt these and other names are already being discussed by the leaders of the United Nations, in the hope that some among them may be able to make Germany safe for the civilized world.

Indians From Asia

WHERE did the Indians come from? Two answers have usually been given. One is that they began on this continent, and have always been here. The other, which is more generally believed, is that they came from Asia by way of the Aleutian islands.

This Aleutian route was ardently championed by Ales Hrdlicka of the Smithsonian Institute at Washington, who has just died at 74. A Bohemian by birth, he came to this country at 13, and became one of the world's greatest authorities on the early history and physical makeup of man. He found close connections in bodily structure between the Indians and the dwellers in Eastern Asia, and was sure that the Indians came from Asia, only about 10,000 years ago. While to most people that seems pretty far back, to a scientist dealing with the beginnings of man is it quite a late date.

If true, this is a second reason why the Aleutian Islands should interest Americans. Our armed forces have provided the other.

Useful Discards

PERHAPS the greatest undeveloped resource in this country is people. It is surprising, as man-power and woman-power are demanded in every-growing quantity, how many useful workers are found who used to be considered economic zeros. The United States Employment Service last year placed in war-connected jobs nearly 5,000 people who formerly would have been considered of no use to society. A few examples may be interesting.

One was a woman 56 years old and only three feet five inches tall, whose only previous work has been the occasional care of children. She is now a useful employe of an optical company.

In a big industrial plant is a 29-year-old girl who lost an arm nine years ago, and in that time had only six months of employment. She is now doing well.

Then there is a 23-year-old Negro girl with failing eyesight who, despite her handicap, is making munition containers, and her boss is going to give her a clerical job.

Another woman, aged 42 and only four feet tall, with curvature of the spine, is supporting her invalid husband as a power sewing machine operator. And a 21-year-old deaf mute, given a chance as an assembler in a factory which makes munition packages, is producing 30 per cent more than normal women.

In view of such cases, who will venture to say that anyone is useless?

There is not so much difference after all between the Italian policies of the Nazis and of the United Nations. The Nazis want to re-Duce Mussolini, the United Nations to reduce him.

WHAT'S THAT YOU SAID ABOUT DRAFTS, DOC?

Difference Over Invasion Route Prime Cause of Marshall Uproar

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

IT GIVES exceedingly to wonder whether the authoritative Army and Navy Journal hasn't opened the closet door on a rather grim international skeleton by its sensational assertion that powerful interests would like to remove Chief of Staff General George C. Marshall from the Washington scene.

"Acting under the president's instruction," explains the Journal, "He (Marshall) has labored zealously to insure the fullest measure of cooperation with our Allies and especially the British, a policy based on the president's and his own appreciation of the necessity of safeguarding American interests . . . Thinking only of winning the war in the shortest time and of saving every American life possible, in connection with the bloody operations which it calls for, General Marshall, of course, has come into conflict with powerful interests which would like to eliminate him from the Washington picture, and place in his stead an officer more amenable to their will."

That's a nasty picture. Who are these powerful interests? The Journal leaves it to us to figure it out for ourselves. The general public has learned of only one difference of opinion between Marshall and critics.

The chief of staff is said to have held firmly to the conviction that western Europe should be invaded directly from England. Other strategists, particularly those on the British side of the table, have frowned on cross-channel invasion. Timing of the drive also is said to have caused some dissension.

Well, it certainly is interesting to know where General Marshall has stood on such invasion, for that has been one of the major issues of the war, as Moscow hasn't allowed us to forget. Readers of this column over a considerable period will recall that it persistently has pointed out that the quickest way to victory would be this admittedly highly dangerous operation — always provided the Allies were properly set for it. Nobody with any knowledge of military affairs would suggest such an invasion short of full preparedness.

You'll find plenty of military experts who feel that had the Allies been able to invade France this summer, it likely would have been possible to finish Hitler off by the end of the year. Some think it still might be done, if the operation were started soon, though admittedly the season is late.

The Russian plea of course has been that the appointed hour for invasion is while the Germans are in dire straits on the Red front. General Marshall himself in testifying before the senate and house military committees on the need of more men for the army, declared:

"While you have the other fellow on the run, the more you do to cut him down before he regains his balance, the better it is."

One of the arguments against cross-channel invasion now is that the Germans are better prepared for an attack on the French and Belgian coasts than at any other place. For this reason the Nazis would like the allies to try this operation. It also is argued that failure might be catastrophic for the Allies. There are other arguments, including the one that we are helping relieve pressure on the Russians by invading Italy, and would give further aid by invading the Balkans.

Well, there's truth in this. However, it's apparent that the Russians don't want the Allies to invade the Balkans, which Moscow regards as its sphere of influence. We know also, that Britain long has worked to extend her influence in the Balkans, which lie up against her special sphere of influence in the middle east. Thus we encounter a political angle, quite apart from the military.

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Saturday, Sept. 22, 1923.

"Unconditional surrender" by Germany was announced by France as only terms in connection with reparation demands.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Gibson, daughter Jean, and Miss Margaret Maxwell returned after three-months tour of Europe.

Members of Richland county Beagle Kennel club met to arrange field trials.

Rev. H. R Whiting arrived from Youngstown to assume pastorate of Central Methodist church.

Miss Myrtle L. Ruley and Robert G. Campbell were married by Rev. F. C. Anderson.

Charles H. Sword went to Ann Arbor to resume studies at University of Michigan.

Daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. J. W. House, 115 Blanche street; daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Max Williams, 85 East Dickson avenue; son to Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Yarman, 13 Vale avenue.

LIFE'S LIKE THAT

"I can't watch both so which do you want burnt . . . your bacon or your toast?"

Dave Boone Says:

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT gave some plain and startling figures the other day showing the alarming daily cost of the war. So everybody should read Bernard Baruch's report which came out the next day declaring that millions could be cut from this bill by abolishing the cost-plus system in war contracts.

If the government wants to save the taxpayers money, according to Mr. Baruch, it should worry less about the five or ten cents of a production dollar that goes into profits and pay attention to the eighty-five and ninety cents of the dollar that goes into unnecessary costs under the cost-plus system.

Under this system all costs are assumed by Uncle Sam (and you), the factory owners getting a percentage above that. The result is, says Mr. Baruch, that waste, soldiering and extravagance, which no manufacturer would tolerate if he had to pay for 'em out of his own pocket, are allowed to roll merrily along.

You would think that Washington, emphasizing the terrific cost of war, would do something about this so fast it would make you dizzy.

—By D. K. W.

YOU WANT to look out for Americans when they get mad. From the crash in 1929 until the autumn of 1942 they went through an almost constant series of emergencies—some real and some trumped up by politicians—but they didn't get very excited. Then came the Pearl Harbor stab-in-the-back. They got mad.

* * *

It was a deep anger. There was an attempt to whip it up with home made propaganda, principally through OWI broadcasts. But the anger was so deep and so furious the whipping-up efforts looked plain puny.

* * *

And now you've got the results: the greatest navy and naval air power in history, war production that staggers the imagination, and a still-fierce desire to get on with the war. Yep, some people used to call us "Uncle Shylock" but the Axis is going to be saying "uncle" in a different tone of voice before long.

Clash of General and Wheeler on Father Draft Enlivened Hearings

WASHINGTON—A lot of debate over drafting fathers was held behind closed doors. If the public had been let in, it would have witnessed a hot flareup between Senator Wheeler of Montana and Lt. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, deputy chief of staff.

McNarney touched off the fireworks by declaring that Wheeler's bill to postpone the induction of fathers might "prolong the war for a year."

"The time factor is all-important in defeating the enemy now, rather than waiting until next year or the year following," said Gen. McNarney in caustic tones.

"If you give the enemy time to establish his defense," continued McNarney, "the cost and time of our operations may be greatly increased and it will mean the drafting of many more fathers in the future. It would be very unfortunate if you pass a bill of restrictive character to control the war effort—to put the hobbles on it."

"That doesn't make sense to me," interrupted Wheeler. He declared that there need be no holdup in increasing the Army, since there were enough deferred single men who could be taken. He added that the Army still had about 2,700,000 troops in the U. S. A. to draw on.

"Well, maybe you know more about it than I do," snapped McNarney.

"No, I don't claim to know more than you," shot back Wheeler.

A little later he fired this critical statement at the War department:

"The taking of married men with children is breaking up the American home. The Army manpower question has been mishandled to a point where it has done more to break down the morale of the people back home than almost anything. It ought to be corrected."

Latin American Troops.

UNDER Secretary of War Patterson was questioned closely by GOP Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire and others on the possibility of recruiting troops in Latin America, chiefly Mexico and Brazil. Brazil probably has the best trained troops south of the Rio Grande, Patterson replied, but he added, "We cannot alter our plans through the hope of getting Mexicans and Brazilians."

South American nations are giving us greater assistance, in the form of raw materials, than during the last war, the under secretary stated.

Practically all discussion of the British and Canadian conscription programs was significantly deleted from the record. But Patterson explained that plans for drafting men in the United States and Great Britain are worked out by the combined chiefs of staff. "We have to take our share," he added.

Senate Majority Leader Alben Barkley of Kentucky injected one chuckle into the proceedings when it was revealed that some men with only one eye or one leg had been drafted for limited service. While McNarney was being questioned about this, the droll Kentuckian suddenly observed:

"Lord Nelson was blind in one eye and they say that if he had to look at something he didn't want to see he always put the telescope to the blind eye."

FDR and Hoover.

HERBERT HOOVER came in for some rough mauling during President Roosevelt's conference with the leaders of the Big Four farm organizations last week.

Roosevelt said that several statements Hoover made recently, criticizing the "mess" the administration has made of the food problem and demanding an over-all food czar, almost provoked him to a public reply.

Such criticisms undermine public morale in wartime, the president told his guests, adding:

"No doubt Mr. Hoover is getting a lot of glee out of emphasizing the shortages of meat and other commodities, which we all have to put up with in these times."

The president dwelt on Hoover for some time. He endeavored, while not saying so directly, to get over the point that his Republican predecessor was attempting to make political capital out of the war privations.

Roosevelt was in fighting trim all through the conference. The first thing he told the farm group spokesman was that he was disappointed about the "disunity" in farm ranks over price subsidies. Subsidies, he said, were necessary both to prevent inflation and to boost the production of vital farm crops.

"I'm willing to give and take, Mr. President," said James Patton, president of the National Farmers' Union, "but I won't stop arguing on fundamentals. I want to raise my small voice for about 4,000,000 small farmers who need more than higher prices to keep them alive. They also need greater financial assistance from the government.

"Farm income has reached an all-time high," Patton continued, "but this hasn't helped the little farmer very much. All the profits are going to the big farmer. He can afford to operate on a volume basis in dealing with distributors and processors."

Roosevelt agreed that the government would have to render greater aid to the small farmer.

President Surprised.

THE PRESIDENT got something of a surprise from other farm leaders at their general approval of the price subsidy program. He has been trying to sell this to the congressional farm bloc for months, without success. The farm leaders now call subsidies by another name, "price support," but the White House is not quibbling over names.

Regardless of the name, all the farm spokesmen agreed that federal price support subsidies are needed to insure a bumper farm crop next year. Even Ed O'Neal, president of the Farm Bureau Federation, one of the strongest opponents of subsidies, concurred.

O'Neal admitted that such a program would help to head off inflation, but he caused the president almost to keel out of his chair by protesting against the American Farm Bureau's number one battle hymn—higher farm prices.

The farm bureau president declared that if prices went too high that might react against the farmer after the war when prices might fall from high war-time peaks.

Note: Albert Goss, master of the National Grange, made it clear that while he would go along, he favored price support subsidies on a selective basis, for certain crops, not for all crops on a general basis.

Father Was An Unusual Sort of Man, But a Pretty Good Friend; Had Most of His Trouble With Cars.

DANA, Ind.—Perhaps you have heard of my father. He is the man who put oil on his brakes when they got to squeaking, then drove to town and ran over the curb and through a plate glass window and right into a dry goods store.

My father is also the man who ran with Roosevelt in 1932. He ran for county assessor, was the only Democrat in the county who lost, and was probably the happiest man who listened to election returns that night. He couldn't think of anything worse than being county assessor.

And the reason he lost was that all the people figured that if he was county assessorr, he wouldn't have time to put roofs or their houses, and paint their barns, and paper their dining rooms and fix their chimneys and do a thousand one other things for them. I guess when my father is gone this whole neighborhood will just sort of fall down.

My father has never lived anywhere but on a farm, and yet I don't think he ever did like the farm very well. He started renting the farm out after the First World war, and ever since, he has been carpentering and handymanning all about the neighborhood. He is a wizard with tools, where other people are clumsy. He is a carpenter at heart.

My father did start out to see the world once when he was a young man. He went to Iowa to cut broom corn, but broke his leg and had to come home.

He never went anywhere again till he was 55, when he went to California to see his brother. He sat up all the way in a day coach. Since then he has been to New York, so now he has seen both oceans.

My father is a very quiet man. He has never said a great deal to me all his life, and yet I feel that we have been very good friends. He never gave me much advice, or told me to do this or that, or not to. But he didn't spare me either. I worked like a horse from the time I was 9.

My father never shows much emotion. He has never seen a big league ball game. Yet my mother came home one afternoon during a World Series, and caught him sitting in front of the radio, all by himself, clapipng and yelling for all he was worth.

My father used to work as a hired hand way over on the other side of the Wabash river. When he was courting my mother, every Sunday he would drive a horse six miles to the river, row a boat across, and then ride a bicycle ten miles to my mother's house. At midnight he started the same process going home. Mother figured he either loved her, or else was foolish and needed somebody to look after him, so she married him.

If my father doesn't like people, he never says anything about it. If he does like people, he never says much about that either. He is very even-tempered. If he has an enemy in this whole country, I have yet to hear about it.

He bought me a roadster when I was about 16, and when I wrecked it a couple of weeks later, he never said a word.

When my father was in Washington, he kept butting his head against those big glass cases that hold exhibits in the Smithsonian Institution. The glass was polished so clean he couldn't see it. We all thought it was awfully funny. He got a splitting headache from it.

We got our first automobile in 1914. We kept it up in the north end of the wagon shed, right behind the wagon. At the south end of the wagon shed there was a big gravel pit.

One day we came home from town, my mother and I got out at the house, and father vent to put the car away. We saw him make the circle in the barnlot, and then drive into the north end of the shed. The next instant, the south end of the shed simply burst open, a wagon came leaping out, and with one great bound was over the cliff and down in the gravel pit. My father said he never did know exactly what happened.

While Ernie Pyle rests after his strenuous task of covering the war in North Africa and Tunisia, several of his favorite columns are being re-printed. This is one of them.

A Farmer's Diary By CALVIN A. BYERS

Orchard Sentiment

WE WENT up among the apple trees, my orchardist neighbor and I. I had asked if I could buy some cooking apples. "Yes," he said, "we have some windfalls just now, if they will do. You'll find them none too good, but we'll pick up the best."

"Drops that are not too soft are all right—much better than none," I told him.

Beneath three trees that had been picked for market, the ground was covered with white and pinkish cheeked apples of various sizes. Some were soft—some big ones were broken by the fall. Yellow jackets, hornets, bees and butterflies sipped sweetness from the broken parts. Here about the trees, with so many underneath, the atmosphere was heavy with appleflavor—the luscious sharpness of Maiden Blush.

We picked a half bushel, then the owner suggested we walk through the orchard. The bluegrass was thick and tall between the rows. It distilled a rare damp coolness to our ankles. We visited the fruitless plum and cherry section, the latter already showing numerous bare boughs. High on a northern slope these stood. Cherries did not do so well, he explained, in partial disappointment.

Then, as we resumed our survey of the long lines of trees laden with scarlet Jonathans; dark colored Starkings; fragrant, greenish yellow Grimes Goldens; pink cheeked Winter Bananas—I saw his spirits rise. It was a pleasing sight, indeed, in the quiet coolness of autumn afternoon, to look upon such shades of coloring.

My friend's deep pride could not be concealed; his smile did not hint of profit; an inner joy lit up his weatherbeaten face and his beaming eyes expressed a rare affection for every fruiting tree about us. These trees were his living world,—and a lovely world it was. Without a word spoken, I knew him for a master orchardist.

"And what is that outfit down there?" I asked pointing to an oldtime wagon.

"That was my Dad's first spray outfit that he made, himself. One tank is for air, the other for spray material. I know it looks bad—I wanted to burn it and save the old iron, but Dad said he guessed we let it stand awhile. You see Dad planted the orchard—I think I know how he feels about it being where it did so much good. I won't move it, even if it rots. I guess that was what it took to make an orchard—that, and lots of days of hard work that wasn't too difficult because he did it for the trees."

EASES CREDIT REQUIREMENTS FOR ARMY-BOUND STUDENTS

By adopting recommendations of the state department of education in granting credits to high school youths who enter military service, the Mansfield board of education today had made it easier for Senior high pupils to win their credits while they are serving in the armed forces.

Under new regulations set up last night by the school board, any pupils who enter the armed forces 60 days or more after the beginning of the school year will receive credit in each subject they were taking if their grades were satisfactory at the time of their enlistment or induction.

Former school regulations made pupils eligible for credits only if they were inducted or enlisted during the final semester of the year.

In its recommendations to the board, the state department of education suggested that youths who go into the armed forces before graduation should be encouraged to continue their education through the training programs offered by the army, navy, and marines.

The school board voted to withhold group insurance dues from the pay of teachers who request it. The action was taken on the recommendation of Paul I. Hauserman, president of the Mansfield City Teachers' association, who said the payroll deductions would save each teacher participating in the insurance plan 50 cents a year.

Use of four rooms at John Simpson junior high school for Ashland college extension classes for three hours Tuesday and Thursday nights was authorized by the board. A charge of one dollar per room for light and heat and $3 per night for janitor service will be made by the board.

BARBER JAILED

ST. LOUIS—(INS)—Training as a barber saved Curtis C. Cain, 37, of St. Louis, from a city workhouse sentence of confessed burglary. Instead he will spend five months trimming the hair of city jail inmates City Jail Warden E. E. Hensler, who knew of his skill, asked that Cain be sent there.
